ACTION ON COLLEGE CHARGES DELAYED YEAR

RESOLUTION INTRODUCED IN MORNING

BAPTIST STATE CONVENTION VOTES UNANIMOUSLY IN FAVOR OF RESOLUTION

MATTER OF CHARGES AGAINST CARLETON COLLEGE AIRED BY DR. W. B. RILEY

Following two hours' discussion yesterday of Dr. W. B. Riley, Minneapolis, charges against Carleton college teaching, the matter was taken up this morning shortly after 10 o'clock as a special order of business of the Baptist state convention, concluding its three days session here today.

Oil seems to have been poured on troubled waters and Dr. Riley introduced this resolution which was unanimously adopted:

"Whereas, the present student body is already enrolled for the coming year, and whereas there is no plan for further Baptist contribution of money in the next twelve months, and whereas the existing committee of the Board has made no report on the charges preferred, therefore be it resolved that the matter be taken out of the hands of the Board, a new committee of five agreeable to both parties of this discussion be appointed by the convention, and asked to report to the annual convention one year hence."

The committee of five was named and includes Rev. A. M. McDonald, pastor First Baptist church, St. Paul; Attorney L. S. High, Duluth; Dr. E. V. Pierce, pastor Lake Harriet Baptist church, Minneapolis; Rev. C. W. Foley, pastor Windom Park church, Minneapolis; M. F. Schutt, member Trinity church, Minneapolis.

Tuesday Afternoon Session

By a vote of 127 to 124 the Baptist State Convention adjourned its afternoon business session to 10 A. M. Wednesday, Oct. 12, and with it carried further discussion of the charges brought by Dr. W. B. Riley, pastor of the First Baptist church of Minneapolis, against Carleton college.

These charges, first enunciated at the Baptist state convention at Rochester, Minn., in Oct., 1926, declared that unsound teaching was being given at Carleton. At that time Dr. Riley asked for the immediate termination of an affiliation agreement existing between Carleton college and the Baptist denomination since 1916.

The 1926 convention adopted a substitute resolution referring the matter to the board of trustees of the state convention for investigation and consideration and to report at the 1927 convention.

The board of trustees of the state convention appointed a special committee of five consisting of Dr. H. Walker Vincent, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church of Minneapolis; Dr. A. M. McDonald, pastor of the First Baptist church of St. Paul; Rev. A. J. Hoag, pastor of the First Baptist church of Albert Lea; Attorney Leslie S. High of Duluth, and Attorney F. K. Pratt of Minneapolis, the president of the state convention.

After considerable parliamentary discussion Dr. Riley read new charges. The special committee claimed that delay in consideration of the charges resulted from Dr. Riley's delay in presenting information in support of such charges.

The debate following turned upon the point as to whether the report of the board advising that the matter be continued with the committee for a year be adopted or whether the matter be disposed of at the present convention.

Dr. Riley in his charges as read before the convention, attacked Dr. Albert Parker Fitch, the head of the religious department of Carleton college, alleging that he had denied the inspiration of the bible, the deity of Jesus Christ and the resurrection. Dr. Riley gave extensive quotations from books published by Mr. Fitch, and held that these quotations substantiated his charges.

Dr. Riley resented the motion to adjourn as he wished a continued hearing and wanted the matter disposed of before adjournment. His plea in short was that a resolution be adopted withholding our children and Baptist money from Carleton until such time as we are assured of its orthodoxy.

Dr. Bryan-Jones, Minneapolis, pastor of Trinity Baptist church, defended Carleton college. Dr. A. M. McDonald, St. Paul, pastor of the First Baptist church, related work done by the special committee in examining the charges brought by Dr. Riley, and the difficulties and delays he claimed resulted from Dr. Riley's inability to give his statement allegedly substantiating his original charges until late in the summer.

Rev. Howard Vernon, Minneapolis, pastor of Judson Memorial church, plead for fair play and that all the witnesses be heard, stating that he could bring two witnesses in favor of Carleton, for every one that Dr. Riley could produce in support of his contentions.

Dr. Riley's Statement

Dr. W. B. Riley gave out this statement Tuesday evening:

Dr. W. B. Riley, pastor of the First Baptist church, Minneapolis, in his charges against Carleton college teaching consumed over two hours at the Baptist state convention Tuesday afternoon at the end of which time the vote to adjourn to 10 o'clock Wednesday morning carried by the narrow margin of three votes.

EARTH TREMORS THROW AUSTRIAN TOWN INTO PANIC

London, Oct. 12—(UP)—Continuing earth tremors have thrown the populace of Schawdorf, near Vienna, into a panic, a Daily Mail dispatch from Vienna reported today. The people refuse to re-enter their homes and have placed their furniture on the roads. Since last Sautrday they have slept in barns and fields, and the children are suffering severely from the cold.

POSSE-LIKE HUNTING OF THE FUGITIVE GROUPS

LEADERS IN REVOLUTION IN MEXICO ACTUATED BY PERSONAL AMBITION

PRESIDENT CALLES MAKES A STATEMENT TO AMERICAN NEWSPAPERMEN

By G. F. FINNE,
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Mexico City, Oct. 12. — Mexico's abortive revolution today deteriorated to posse-like hunting of small fugitive groups—a failure because its leaders had only their personal ambition to offer the country — President Calles declared in a statement to American newspaper correspondents.

Calles disclosed that he had known of plans for a revolt. His exposition pictured him as receiving secret service reports of rebel plans to subvert the army and kidnap or assassinate him. For weeks, he indicated, he pursued his routine duties while knowing that at any moment he might be attacked.

He said the rebels had set two previous dates for their revolt — September 15 and 27—before finally General Hector Almada of the Mexico City garrison precipitated the rebellion by marching out of the capital with a portion of his men.

That was on October 2, and on that day, Calles said, he was to have attended maneuvers conducted by troops of which the rebels formed a part. Almada, he said, had pressed him to attend.

GERMAN PLANE STARTS OUT TODAY

DESTINATION OF HEINKEL BIPLANE KEPT A CLOSE SECRET

Warnemuende, Germany, Oct. 12. —(UP)—The Heinkel biplane D1220 took off at 1:21 P. M., today on a flight with destination kept a close secret.

If flying conditions were good, it was said reliably the plane might go to the Azores, presumably intending to continue to the North American coast.

It was understood the plans were being kept secret to avoid the stigma of a forced landing that might cause abandonment of the flight.

It was believed here the plane intended to try to make Lisbon or the Azores in an effort to beat a Junkers seaplane, now held at Lisbon by fog, that started out on a trans-Atlantic flight several days ago.

DISASTROUS FIRE AT OCEAN CITY, 30 BUILDINGS LOST

LOSS OF ABOUT $4,000,000 RECORDED IN NEW JERSEY CITY

3 FIREMEN INJURED SEVERELY BY GLASS AND FLAMES

Ocean City, N. J., Oct. 12.—(UP)—An era eight blocks square was a smoldering mass of debris today after one of the most disastrous fires in local history.

Thirty buildings were razed, causing a loss of approximately $4,000,000. Among them were three big frame hotels, shops, business houses, a garage, two motion picture theatres, many boardwalk concessions and the Hippodrome pier.

Three firemen were injured severely by glass and flames, one of them perhaps fatally, Emil Landbach of Ocean City, was killed near Mays Landing, N. J., when his automobile skidded and overturned while he was on his way to the fire. He had heard that his home was in danger.

The fire started at 7 P. M., and within a few hours several frame buildings were ablaze. A shift in the wind at 11 P. M. helped check the blaze. Fireproof buildings along Asbury Avenue, the main business section, also aided in checking the flames.

At midnight fire fighters from a dozen cities who answered the call for help had the flames under control.

Relief measures for the scores dispossessed were under way today.

Most of the cottages, boarding houses and hotels in the path of the flames were deserted for the winter. The population of Ocean City had shrunk from 100,000 to close to its winter time 8,000.

The fire is believed to have been started by someone who threw a lighted match into a pile of rubbish under the boardwalk.

U. S. REPLIES TO FRENCH TARIFF NOTE OF SEPT. 30

Paris, Oct. 12.—(UP)—Charge d'Affaires Sheldon Whitehouse, of the American embassy, late yesterday presented to the French foreign office the state department's reply to the French tariff note of September 30.

The foreign office refused to publish the note until a council of ministers discussed it Friday. After that, it was said, the note might be published if the United States agreed.

Washington, Oct. 12.—(UP)—The new United States note to France, delivered in Paris yesterday, repeats this government's demand for tariff equality.

It says France must cease her present discriminations against American goods and grant this country most-favored-nation treatment through application of her minimum tariff rates, pending negotiations of a permanent treaty.

The note expressed this government's readiness to act on French proposals that it re-examine its data on French production costs with the possibility of lowering American duties, and re-examine its present sanitary embargoes against certain French products.

The United States points out, however, that it cannot guarantee that such studies will justify lowering duties on French goods as permitted by the equalization-of-production-costs provision of the American tariff law.

The note states this government does not criticize the height of French tariffs, which is solely a French domestic matter, but the United States must continue to insist on receiving the same rates accorded by France to others. While Germany is enjoying a minimum French rate, American goods are charged a maximum rate often 400 per cent higher.

Until a permanent treaty can be negotiated, the United States asks the minimum rate for American goods, or equality with Germany.

RAIN STORM DELAYS FLIERS IN AFRICA

St. Louis, Senegal, Oct. 12.—(UP)—A rain storm that flooded the aviation field here made it problematical whether Dieudonne Costes and Joseph Lebrix could continue today their flight from Paris to Brazil and Argentina.

The heavy storm that broke over St. Louis this morning made it impossible for mechanics to overhaul the plane.

Costes and Lebrix philosophically spent the morning resting.

The governor of Senegal invited them to visit him this afternoon for a farewell glass of champagne.

It developed that the Bregut plane's radio apparatus was damaged slightly when it left Paris and an expert was examining it today.

Costes, after surveying conditions at the flying field, said he now planned to start at 10 a. m. Thursday.

GIRL NOMINATED FOR MAYOR OF CONCORD

RAPID RISE IN POLITICS BY MISS HELEN GWENDOLYN JONES

STATE UNIVERSITY GRADUATE IS FORMER TELEPHONE OPERATOR

Concord, N. H., Oct. 12.—(UP)—Although she entered politics less than two weeks ago, Miss Helen Gwendolyn Jones, state university graduate, was nominated for mayor of New Hampshire's capital city at the primary yesterday.

The 24-year-old girl, a former telephone operator, finished second in yesterday's four-cornered primary contest. She easily disposed of two seasoned politicians of the opposite sex and gave the incumbent a sharp battle. She and the present mayor will fight it out for the office at the elections.

Today, Miss Jones prepared to "treat this city to a real old-fashioned campaign." She said she had used "velvet glove" methods in her pre-primary fight, but that she would now make it "a real fight."

Mayor Fred N. Marden, a former policeman, was the only one of her three men opponents who beat her in the primary. He received 1,999 votes, compared with 1,034 for Miss Jones.

The other candidates, State Representative Edward D. Haskell and former Mayor Willard H. Flint, were far behind, polling 561 votes and 469 votes, respectively.

CLAIMS MAINTENANCE YEARS AFTER DIVORCE

Clayton, Mo., Oct. 12.—(UP)—Thirty years after her divorce from Harry J. Shaller of St. Louis, Mrs. Louise J. Kistler, of Philadelphia, has filed suit in circuit court here for $8,580 for maintenance since 1896, and for support of a child since 1891, when Shaller allegedly deserted her.

QUAKES FELT IN JOHANNESBURG AND ROME, ITALY

Capetown, Oct. 12.—(UP)—High buildings shivered, ceilings of houses cracked, and crockery crashed during a 20-second earth tremor at Johannesburg last night—the severest in recent years.

It was reported today that several natives have been killed in storms in the Transvaal district this week.

Rome, Oct. 12.—(UP)—Tens of thousands of people camped in the countryside last night, fearing return of the earth tremors felt here during the afternoon.

ROADWAYS LITTERED WITH MUCH DEBRIS

ROOF OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOL IS CARRIED AWAY BY TWISTER

Blytheville, Ark., Oct. 12—(UP)—A cyclone which struck the little farming community of Bell, 10 miles west of here, at midnight, killed five of the town's 100 inhabitants, seriously injured ten others and caused unestimated property damage. Ten homes were unroofed.

The dead are:

O. P. Winn, 80, justice of the peace.

Mrs. O. P. Winn, 78, his wife.

Austin Hardin, farmer.

Mrs. John Hardin, his sister-in-law.

An unidentified Negress.

The injured, including nine white persons and one Negro, were brought to hospitals here.

Roadways leading to Blytheville were littered with traces of the twister, communication lines were down in the town and the roof of the public school was carried away.

DECLARE BOMBING NO PART OF THEIR STRIKE PROGRAM

St. Paul, Oct. 12.—(UP)—While theatre employes' strike leaders declare the bombing of two movie houses and a film exchange was no part of their program, and that rowdies are responsible for blasts, guards remained at all Twin Cities theatres throughout the night to prevent further terrorism attempts.

At Minneapolis the sale of short term notes to permit hiring 100 special police for theatre guard duty will be considered today.

No arrests were made in the bombing of a neighborhood theatre in Minneapolis early Monday, and of a St. Paul theatre during the performance Monday night, resulting in injury to an aged woman when 250 persons, many of them children, rushed for exists.

Police likewise have failed to solve the bombing two weeks ago of a film exchange at Minneapolis.

AGED WIDOW HAS TERRORIZED TOWN FOR FIVE DAYS

Gallipolis, O., Oct. 12—(UP)—Armed with a dozen rifles, revolvers and shotguns with five hundred rounds of ammunition, Mrs. Grace George, 76, widow of a prominent West Virginian, has kept the small village of Buffalo, W. Va., near here, terrorized for five days.

Mrs. George, who was recently released from the West Virginia pathological hospital, last week gathered her armory in her home and directed fire at imaginary enemies in the yard.

A sheriff, who was called, was wounded in an attempt to capture the woman whose "attack" has kept citizens at a distance.

Today, attendants from the state institution planned to use tear gas in an effort to capture the woman.

POLICE TAKE MAN WHO ESCAPED FROM ST. PETER ASYLUM

St. Paul, Oct. 12.—(UP)—While two criminally insane men who escaped from the asylum at St. Peter ten days ago still are at large, St. Paul police today captured Egenat Bednar, who walked away from the institution late yesterday.

Police throughout the state are seeking John Dermity and William Yahr, the former considered dangerous. The men escaped through a steam-pipe tunnel.

LABOR DELEGATES FAVOR RETURN OF 'WHOLESOME BEER'

Los Angeles, Oct. 12.—(UP)—Delegates to the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor turned to new business today, after going on record as favoring return of "wholesome beer" and expressing opposition to military conscription.

The delegates yesterday passed a resolution favoring modification of the Volstead act. Then they listened to an address by Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff, who declared that the United States must have peace.

MUSCLE SHOALS, BOULDER DAM ARE CRITICIZED

MOVEMENTS FOR GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP DRAW FIRE

JAMES A. EMERY, COUNSEL FOR NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MANUFACTURERS, SPEAKS

Chicago, Oct. 12.—(UP)—Movements for government ownership and operation of Muscle Shoals and Boulder Dam power projects were criticized before the American Gas Association here today by James A. Emery, counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers.

Federal operation of shipping lines and other examples of government entrance into private industry also were assailed.

"The United States as owner of factories, transportation or power lines is an unfair business man in competition with private industry," Emery told the utilities officials.

"The government has credit, it pays no taxes or insurance, and every instance in which government ownership is urged is founded upon anticipation that it will undersell competitors.

"An unprecedented proportion of the property of the individual is being taken for purposes of government."

The government is being headed toward business operations "in new and broader forms," he said.

RATS, COCKROACHES THREATEN TREASURY

SOME OF RATS IN U. S. BUILDING ARE LARGE AS KITTENS

Washington, Oct. 12—(UP)—Rats and cockroaches are threatening the United States treasury.

Droves of rats, driven from the buildings being remodeled, have invaded the treasury basement, where the money vaults are located. Some of the rats are as large as kittens.

They scoot through the corridors at night searching for crumbs of lunches or glue from the back of choice federal documents. Cockroaches, as bold, have invaded the desks, ruined valuable papers and damaged books.

F. A. Birgfeld, chief clerk of the treasury, has started a war against the vermin. "Sweet air," a special gas, is checking the advance of the roaches and smaller bugs.

The rats, however, appear educated. They avoid most traps. A special trap, with a piece of tissue paper hiding the spring, is now being used in an effort to entice them.

A sharp shooter, armed with a rifle, has been detailed at night to pick off the rats as they run from coal and trash vaults outside the building to the treasury structure proper.

Birgfeld has ordered all treasury employes to refrain from leaving particles of lunch in their desks. A number of traps have been placed in the silver vaults.

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 12.—(UP)—Four men held here in connection with floggings in Crenshaw county have confessed, it was announced today and were taken at once to Luverne to testify before the grand jury investigating similar cases in the county.

STEAMER SIGHTS THEM 10:30 P. M. YESTERDAY

FLYING CONDITIONS, "AMERICAN BANKER" REPORTS, WERE IDEAL

PLANE WAS IN MIDDLE OF THE MAIN STEAMER LANE

New York, Oct. 12.—(UP)—Unsighted since 10:35 P. M. yesterday when they passed the steamer American Banker, Ruth Elder and George Haldeman were presumed to be flying east-northeast over the Atlantic, about 1,400 miles out of New York, at 7 A. M. today.

Assuming the plane to be still in the air, it should have turned from its due eastward stage and begun heading a little northward to the French coast.

The plane was sighted by the steamship American Banker at latitude 41 north, longitude 65.04 west at 10:30 P. M. yesterday. Flying conditions, the ship reported through the Independent Wireless Company, were ideal. The plane was flying at 80 degrees from true north — roughly east-northeast.

Since then the plane would have sped along at roughly 100 miles an hour on its 4,000-mile flight—3,600 of them over water.

It was estimated here that at 7 A. M. the plane, if all was well, should have been approaching the 45th parallel of longitude, due south of Greenland and a little north of due east from New York.

The plane was in the middle of the main steamer lane, to which it had stuck between the time it passed Ambrose light, off the New York coast, and the time the American Banker reported seeing it 350 miles east of the light and about 560 miles from Roosevelt Field, the starting point.

New York, Oct. 12—(UP)—Twenty-three-year-old Ruth Elder was somewhere out over the sea today on her way to "do her fall shopping in Paris and be hailed as a heroine and the only woman who has flown successfully across the sea."

Thus 435 years from the day that Christopher Columbus sighted the new world, an American girl was on her way to be the first woman to fly between the new world and the old.

At 10:30 A. M. Miss Elder's plane, if still in the air, should have been around the fiftieth parallel of longitude, heading over the main trans-Atlantic steamer lane east-northeastward toward the French coast and Paris.

The plane, American Girl, in which Miss Elder and Pilot George Haldeman started from Roosevelt field, New York, at 5:04 P. M. yesterday, had not been seen since late last night, when the steamer American Banker reported her 560 miles east of New York.

Two ships in the course of the plane had reported that they had seen no sign of the American Girl, in which Miss Elder and Haldeman were attempting the most dangerous trans-Atlantic flight yet projected.

With her mother's bible and a girl friend's lucky Chinese ring to help her on her way, the "prettiest girl who ever flew a plane" was trying to make a flight of 3,600 miles across unfriendly seas, with a 400 mile final stage through fog across France to Paris and the glory that attaches to such feats of pioneering.

Not so long ago Miss Elder was a dentist's assistant. Today the eyes of the world were following on maps her progress toward glory or death.

If her flight is successful, she will have been the first woman, and one of a handful of human beings, to have made flights across oceans.

"I'm so happy," she said repeatedly before she started.

St. Johns, Newfoundland, Oct. 12. —A wireless message was intercepted from the steamer American Banker in which it reported sighting an airplane in latitude 41.00 north, longitude 65.04 west, steering about 80 true. It was signed by Peddersen, commander.

(The intercepted message appar-

STATE UNIVERSITY GRADUATE IS FORMER TELEPHONE OPERATOR

Concord, N. H., Oct. 12.—(UP)—Although she entered politics less than two weeks ago, Miss Helen Gwendolyn Jones, state university graduate, was nominated for mayor of New Hampshire's capital city at the primary yesterday.

The 24-year-old girl, a former telephone operator, finished second in yesterday's four-cornered primary contest. She easily disposed of two seasoned politicians of the opposite sex and gave the incumbent a sharp battle. She and the present mayor will fight it out for the office at the elections.

Today, Miss Jones prepared to "treat this city to a real old-fashioned campaign." She said she had used "velvet glove" methods in her pre-primary fight, but that she would now make it "a real fight."

Mayor Fred N. Marden, a former policeman, was the only one of her three men opponents who beat her in the primary. He received 1,999 votes, compared with 1,034 for Miss Jones.

The other candidates, State Representative Edward D. Haskell and former Mayor Willard H. Flint, were far behind, polling 561 votes and 469 votes, respectively.

CLAIMS MAINTENANCE YEARS AFTER DIVORCE

Clayton, Mo., Oct. 12.—(UP)—Thirty years after her divorce from Harry J. Shaller of St. Louis, Mrs. Louise J. Kistler, of Philadelphia, has filed suit in circuit court here for $8,580 for maintenance since 1896, and for support of a child since 1891, when Shaller allegedly deserted her.

QUAKES FELT IN JOHANNESBURG AND ROME, ITALY

Capetown, Oct. 12.—(UP)—High buildings shivered, ceilings of houses cracked, and crockery crashed during a 20-second earth tremor at Johannesburg last night—the severest in recent years.

It was reported today that several natives have been killed in storms in the Transvaal district this week.

Rome, Oct. 12.—(UP)—Tens of thousands of people camped in the countryside last night, fearing return of the earth tremors felt here during the afternoon.

ROADWAYS LITTERED WITH MUCH DEBRIS

ROOF OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOL IS CARRIED AWAY BY TWISTER

Blytheville, Ark., Oct. 12—(UP) —A cyclone which struck the little farming community of Bell, 10 miles west of here, at midnight, killed five of the town's 100 inhabitants, seriously injured ten others and caused unestimated property damage. Ten homes were unroofed.

The dead are:

O. P. Winn, 80, justice of the peace.

Mrs. O. P. Winn, 78, his wife.

Austin Hardin, farmer.

Mrs. John Hardin, his sister-in-law.

An unidentified Negress.

The injured, including nine white persons and one Negro, were brought to hospitals here.

Roadways leading to Blytheville were littered with traces of the twister, communication lines were down in the town and the roof of the public school was carried away.

DECLARE BOMBING NO PART OF THEIR STRIKE PROGRAM

St. Paul, Oct. 12.—(UP)—While theatre employes' strike leaders declare the bombing of two movie houses and a film exchange was no part of their program, and that rowdies are responsible for blasts, guards remained at all Twin Cities theatres throughout the night to prevent further terrorism attempts.

At Minneapolis the sale of short term notes to permit hiring 100 special police for theatre guard duty will be considered today.

No arrests were made in the bombing of a neighborhood theatre in Minneapolis early Monday, and of a St. Paul theatre during the performance Monday night, resulting in injury to an aged woman when 250 persons, many of them children, rushed for exists.

Police likewise have failed to solve the bombing two weeks ago of a film exchange at Minneapolis.

AGED WIDOW HAS TERRORIZED TOWN FOR FIVE DAYS

Gallipolis, O., Oct. 12—(UP)—Armed with a dozen rifles, revolvers and shotguns with five hundred rounds of ammunition, Mrs. Grace George, 76, widow of a prominent West Virginian, has kept the small village of Buffalo, W. Va., near here, terrorized for five days.

Mrs. George, who was recently released from the West Virginia pathological hospital, last week gathered her armory in her home and directed fire at imaginary enemies in the yard.

A sheriff, who was called, was wounded in an attempt to capture the woman whose "attack" has kept citizens at a distance.

Today, attendants from the state institution planned to use tear gas in an effort to capture the woman.

POLICE TAKE MAN WHO ESCAPED FROM ST. PETER ASYLUM

St. Paul, Oct. 12.—(UP)—While two criminally insane men who escaped from the asylum at St. Peter ten days ago still are at large, St. Paul police today captured Egenat Bednar, who walked away from the institution late yesterday.

Police throughout the state are seeking John Dermity and William Yahr, the former considered dangerous. The men escaped through a steam-pipe tunnel.

LABOR DELEGATES FAVOR RETURN OF 'WHOLESOME BEER'

Los Angeles, Oct. 12.—(UP)—Delegates to the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor turned to new business today, after going on record as favoring return of "wholesome beer" and expressing opposition to military conscription.

The delegates yesterday passed a resolution favoring modification of the Volstead act. Then they listened to an address by Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff, who declared that the United States must have peace.

MUSCLE SHOALS, BOULDER DAM ARE CRITICIZED

MOVEMENTS FOR GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP DRAW FIRE

Chicago, Oct. 12.—(UP)—Movements for government ownership and operation of Muscle Shoals and Boulder Dam power projects were criticized before the American Gas Association here today by James A. Emery, counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers.

Federal operation of shipping lines and other examples of government entrance into private industry also were assailed.

"The United States as owner of factories, transportation or power lines is an unfair business man in competition with private industry," Emery told the utilities officials.

"The government has credit, it pays no taxes or insurance, and every instance in which government ownership is urged is founded upon anticipation that it will undersell competitors.

"An unprecedented proportion of the property of the individual is being taken for purposes of government."

The government is being headed toward business operations "in new and broader forms," he said.

RATS, COCKROACHES THREATEN TREASURY

SOME OF RATS IN U. S. BUILDING ARE LARGE AS KITTENS

Washington, Oct. 12—(UP)—Rats and cockroaches are threatening the United States treasury.

Droves of rats, driven from the buildings being remodeled, have invaded the treasury basement, where the money vaults are located. Some of the rats are as large as kittens.

They scoot through the corridors at night searching for crumbs of lunches or glue from the back of choice federal documents. Cockroaches, as bold, have invaded the desks, ruined valuable papers and damaged books.

F. A. Birgfeld, chief clerk of the treasury, has started a war against the vermin. "Sweet air," a special gas, is checking the advance of the roaches and smaller bugs.

The rats, however, appear educated. They avoid most traps. A special trap, with a piece of tissue paper hiding the spring, is now being used in an effort to entice them.

A sharp shooter, armed with a rifle, has been detailed at night to pick off the rats as they run from coal and trash vaults outside the building to the treasury structure proper.

Birgfeld has ordered all treasury employes to refrain from leaving particles of lunch in their desks. A number of traps have been placed in the silver vaults.

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 12.—(UP)—Four men held here in connection with floggings in Crenshaw county have confessed, it was announced today and were taken at once to Luverne to testify before the grand jury investigating similar cases in the county.

STEAMER SIGHTS THEM 10:30 P. M. YESTERDAY

FLYING CONDITIONS, "AMERICAN BANKER" REPORTS, WERE IDEAL

PLANE WAS IN MIDDLE OF THE MAIN STEAMER LANE

New York, Oct. 12.—(UP)—Unsighted since 10:35 P. M. yesterday when they passed the steamer American Banker, Ruth Elder and George Haldeman were presumed to be flying east-northeast over the Atlantic, about 1,400 miles out of New York, at 7 A. M. today.

Assuming the plane to be still in the air, it should have turned from its due eastward stage and begun heading a little northward to the French coast.

The plane was sighted by the steamship American Banker at latitude 41 north, longitude 65.04 west at 10:30 P. M. yesterday. Flying conditions, the ship reported through the Independent Wireless Company, were ideal. The plane was flying at 80 degrees from true north — roughly east-northeast.

Since then the plane would have sped along at roughly 100 miles an hour on its 4,000-mile flight—3,600 of them over water.

It was estimated here that at 7 A. M. the plane, if all was well, should have been approaching the 45th parallel of longitude, due south of Greenland and a little north of due east from New York.

The plane was in the middle of the main steamer lane, to which it had stuck between the time it passed Ambrose light, off the New York coast, and the time the American Banker reported seeing it 350 miles east of the light and about 560 miles from Roosevelt Field, the starting point.

New York, Oct. 12—(UP)—Twenty-three-year-old Ruth Elder was somewhere out over the sea today on her way to "do her fall shopping in Paris and be hailed as a heroine and the only woman who has flown successfully across the sea."

Thus 435 years from the day that Christopher Columbus sighted the new world, an American girl was on her way to be the first woman to fly between the new world and the old.

At 10:30 A. M. Miss Elder's plane, if still in the air, should have been around the fiftieth parallel of longitude, heading over the main trans-Atlantic steamer lane east-northeastward toward the French coast and Paris.

The plane, American Girl, in which Miss Elder and Pilot George Haldeman started from Roosevelt field, New York, at 5:04 P. M. yesterday, had not been seen since late last night, when the steamer American Banker reported her 560 miles east of New York.

Two ships in the course of the plane had reported that they had seen no sign of the American Girl, in which Miss Elder and Haldeman were attempting the most dangerous trans-Atlantic flight yet projected.

With her mother's bible and a girl friend's lucky Chinese ring to help her on her way, the "prettiest girl who ever flew a plane" was trying to make a flight of 3,600 miles across unfriendly seas, with a 400 mile final stage through fog across France to Paris and the glory that attaches to such feats of pioneering.

Not so long ago Miss Elder was a dentist's assistant. Today the eyes of the world were following on maps her progress toward glory or death.

If her flight is successful, she will have been the first woman, and one of a handful of human beings, to have made flights across oceans.

"I'm so happy," she said repeatedly before she started.

St. Johns, Newfoundland, Oct. 12. —A wireless message was intercepted from the steamer American Banker in which it reported sighting an airplane in latitude 41.00 north, longitude 65.04 west, steering about 80 true. It was signed by Peddersen, commander.

The committee composed of Mrs. J. A. Thabes, Louis F. Hohman and W. C. Cobb, appointed by the Board of Education to draft a resolution of expression of the sentiments of the Board concerning the death of J. A. Wilson, today extended the following to members of the family:

"It is resolved that the Board of Education recognize in J. A. Wilson a man of sterling character and splendid personal qualities that appealed to all who knew him.

"That as an educator, in his work as City Superintendent of the Brainerd schools, he laid a strong foundation for those who were to follow him.

"That as County Superintendent of Schools he did the pioneer work, the influence of which has been felt in this county for many years.

"That as a loyal friend of the public schools in general and the Brainerd public schools in particular, few persons could be found more devoted, throughout the years, long after his retirement from active service."

Committee Appointed Drafts Resolution Concerning Death of J. A. Wilson

The committee composed of Mrs. J. A. Thabes, Louis F. Hohman and W. C. Cobb, appointed by the Board of Education to draft a resolution of expression of the sentiments of the Board concerning the death of J. A. Wilson, today extended the following to members of the family:

"It is resolved that the Board of Education recognize in J. A. Wilson a man of sterling character and splendid personal qualities that appealed to all who knew him.

"That as an educator, in his work as City Superintendent of the Brainerd schools, he laid a strong foundation for those who were to follow him.

"That as County Superintendent of Schools he did the pioneer work, the influence of which has been felt in this county for many years.

"That as a loyal friend of the public schools in general and the Brainerd public schools in particular, few persons could be found more devoted, throughout the years, long after his retirement from active service."

GEORGES GASTON QUIEN IS CONVICTED BETRAYER OF NURSE EDITH CAVELL

IS CONSIGNED TO ONE-MAN HELL, SERVING 20-YEAR SENTENCE

NOTE—In a recent interview with the United Press at Sidi-Bel-Abbes, Africa, Bennett J. Doty, just returned to duty with the French Foreign Legion after having been pardoned while serving a sentence for desertion, mentioned a "miserable wretch" who was a fellow-prisoner with him at Clairvaux, France.

The prisoner was Georges Quien, Frenchman, serving a twenty-year sentence for the betrayal of Edith Cavell.

He, it was alleged, gave the heroic British nurse, one of the great figures of the world war, into the hands of the Germans to be shot as a spy.

Her crime was smuggling escaped French, British and Belgian soldiers through the German lines, behind which she was doing Red Cross work.

Here, nine years after the close of the war, twelve years after Nurse Cavell's death, was a sequel to the grim story.

Pierre Salarnier, a member of the United Press Paris staff, was sent to Clairvaux prison to interview Quien.

Usually stringent government regulations against visiting prisoners were relaxed as a special favor.

Salarnier talked to Quien in the office of Prison Director Roc, and here is the story about Quien.

By PIERRE SALARNER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1927, by United Press)

Clairvaux, France, Oct. 11.—Cringing, cursed as a Judas, an outcast among outcasts, the most despised man in all of France is living out here a 20-year sentence to a one-man hell.

He is Georges Gaston Quien, 50, convicted betrayer of Nurse Edith Cavell. She died with a smile in 1915 at the hands of a German firing squad.

His aged parents died of shame at his conviction. His friends have deserted him. In all the world he has but one defender — strangely enough, his jailer.

The look of a beaten dog that comes into Quien's eyes when the name Edith Cavell is mentioned, the broken vehemence with which he denies his guilt of the most dastardly of all crimes, has brought him but short laughs of scorn from all but Director Roc of the Clairvaux penitentiary here where Quien is a convict.

M. Roc is so convinced of his innocence, so sure that there has been a miscarriage of justice far worse than the execution of a guiltless man, that he is trying to have Quien's sentence reviewed, hoping at least to have it shortened.

But where could Quien go He is wealthy, but of what avail would be his wealth except to enable him to hide his identity from other men?

"I am suffering a Calvary," he told me. "Mine is a second Dreyfus case."

Even if he convinced the powers that sentenced him, could he convince the world?

Here is the story as it is told by others:

For 40 of his 50 years, Quien has been in almost constant trouble. He had served two prison terms before this one.

Though a Frenchman, a native of the Aisne district, he was not with other Frenchmen mustered into the army at the outbreak of the world war. He was serving a term in jail for theft when the German army entered St. Quentin in 1914 and made him a double prisoner.

With other civil prisoners, Quien was taken to Landrecies.

There, as a trusty, Quien adopted the name of "Doctor Caduret" and began the illegal practice of medicine.

Among his patients, the false Dr. Caduret met Jeanne Balligan, who told him of a plan by which hundreds of allied soldiers were being smuggled to the Dutch frontier and back to their home countries.

According to the original charges against him, Quien succeeded in working his way into the secret committee of ten directing the smuggling.

Posing as a doctor, a lawyer, an army officer and even as a military attache, Quien made himself trusted by the allied patriots.

Thus Quien met Nurse Edith Cavell, at whose hospital, in Brussels, he took refuge July 28, 1915.

One week later Miss Cavell, Princess De Croy and others operating the "underground railroad" were arrested and tried.

Four, including the devoted woman whose name has become a symbol of the spiritually glorious side of war, were sentenced to death by a German court martial.

Nurse Cavell made no complaint. She knew the rules of war, and that they were not always softened in mercy to women.

One morning she walked with serene face and firm step out from her prison cell to face a firing squad of soldiers. With a last defiant message of pride in her country and contempt of death, she awaited the shattering, close-range volley of her executioners.

A barked command, the crash of fire, and Nurse Cavell dropped dead. Hardly had the fumes of smokeless powder curled up from the muzzles of the firing squad's lowered rifles before a revulsion at realization of the full horror of a war to the death went echoing round the world.

Quien soon left Brussels and wandered through the German prison camps, talking to allied soldiers as a friend. Favors shown him by Germans made the allied prisoners of war suspicious.

In 1916, Quien returned to France. He was arrested immediately and sentenced to six months' imprisonmen for theft.

At the expiration of his term, Quien was forced to go into the French army. He was sent to northern Africa. There, in October, 1918, he was arrested as the betrayer of Nurse Cavell.

There was but one possible sentence—death. After two weeks' court debate, this sentence was imposed on Quien.

But doubt arose.

The sentence was changed to one of 20 years' imprisonment.

Now, in the prison here, Quien is fighting for freedom.

He has no friends in the outside world. Even his lawyer has deserted him.

Prison Director Roc alone of all people believes in Quien's innocence, and as I sat with him, and he pressed a bell to give orders for Quien to be brought into the office with us, he told me he was pressing the ministers of war and justice to review the case.

Clairvaux, France, Oct. 12.—His face suddenly a sickening white, his eyes wide opened in terror, George Gaston Quien recoiled as if he had been hit when I mentioned to him the name of Edith Cavell.

"I am suffering a Calvary!" he cried. "I am not guilty!"

Here at Clairvaux penitentiary there were until recently two personalities.

One interested his fellow prisoners because he was an American, and because he had been a hero in war.

That was Bennett J. Doty, American, serving a sentence for desertion from the Foreign Legion.

On the prison records I saw Doty's citation for bravery:

"A Legionnaire of remarkable calm and sang froid; an extraordinary marksman. In the battle of Ressazm Syria, on October 7, 1925, he won general admiration by walking upright through enemy fire, indifferently returning shots as if on the rifle range."

The other personality, of course, was Quien. He spoke wonderingly.—for ordinarily visitors are not admitted to this rigorous penitentiary, immense, forbidding. Once it was a monastery. It was founded in the 12th century by St. Bernard.

It was easy to see how Quien had won his prison nickname of "Double Meter." He is nearly six feet six inches tall. He would attract attention anywhere.

Quien readily responded to several questions I asked him. Then I said:

"I want to ask you about Nurse Cavell."

Quien's huge frame seemed suddenly to collapse into a mass of unhealthy flesh. His face blanched. Cowering, he covered his face with his huge hands. Then his story came with a rush of broken sentences:

"I am not guilty! I am not guilty!

"If you knew the real story of my Calvary you would pity me.

"I have sinned often. I regret. But never—never—did I denounce Nurse Cavell."

"I am the victim of judicial errors," he continued. "It is my past history that has convicted me.

"My lawyer tried hard to save me, but he has lost interest. Now I never hear from him, and he does nothing to reopen my case.

"I am tired of fighting. I am becoming resigned to my fate.

"But I am not guilty.

"My life during the war was a drama. I escaped from the occupied territory to Holland, and I carried out numerous missions for the French military attache.

"For collaborating in Nurse Cavell's work I was twice condemned by the Germans, once to six months' imprisonment at Antwerp.

"Often I handled important military documents.

"I never was in the pay of the Germans.

"I lost because I had a double, tall as I and otherwise closely resembling me. He was named Cavier, and he was a German spy.

"Cavier succeeded into working into the circle that contained Nurse Cavell and others who eventually were shot. It was he who cost them their lives.

"Also Nurse Cavell had a dozen German nurses, any one of whom might have betrayed her.

"Nurse Cavell had with her, too, a German girl she had adopted, a 16-year-old child named Pauline. She was a loose-tongued though well meaning child, who gossiped constantly and could have talked too much.

"It is among those whom I have described that you must look for Nurse Cavell's denunciator.

"I was the victim of a hostile press campaign at a time when passions still were white hot.

"I swear I never touched a penny of German money.

"How unhappy I am! My parents have died. They left me their fortune of several hundred thousand francs, but of what good is it to me? I am 50, and I haven't much hope for the future.

"If I could get a good lawyer and tell him my story there would be a scandal."

There Quien broke down. Tears welled from his eyes, and he sobbed unreservedly. With his face buried in his hands, he was led back to his cell to serve his long sentence, as dead to the world as the nurse of whose betrayal he was convicted.

The question therefore as to whether the Baptists of the state will continue to back Carleton remains undecided but will probably be settled Wednesday morning.

Dr. Riley said the charges presented Tuesday were those presented to the special committee appointed by the board to hear the same some months ago. The committee recommended through the board that decision on the matter go over for a year. This recommendation was the bone of contention.

Dr. Riley presented a substitute motion to the effect that students and funds be withheld from Carleton until such time as she came to a satisfactory evangelical base.

Senator Wells, Minneapolis, defended Dr. Riley's position and insisted upon immediate action. The opposition however to Dr. Riley's motion consumed practically all the time.

President—Mrs. Patee Russell Minneapolis.

First Vice President—Mrs. Earl V. Pierce, Minneapolis.

Second Vice President—Mrs. Charles Johnston, Minneapolis.

Secretary—Mrs. Robert Lansing, St. Paul.

Treasurer—Mrs. A. F. Gale, Minneapolis.

Real School Teacher Part of "Doug's" Company

When Douglas Fairbanks and his company of over one hundred people, including about a dozen children, rode daily to the San Fernando Valley where a massive "set" was constructed resembling the city of Los Angeles of about a century ago and where most of the outdoor scenes of "The Mark of Zorro" were filmed, arrangements were completed to have a school teacher accompany the throng. Thus when the children did not appear before the camera, a most diligent "schoolmarm" could always be seen within the range of the Sierra Madre Mountains, imparting the three "R's" to about a dozen embryo Thespians at the Park tomorrow.

PLEA FOR INDEPENDENT POLITICAL PARTY

Los Angeles, Oct. 12.—(UP)—A plea for an independent political party to serve the interests of city workers, farmers and progressives generally was made before the 47th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor late yesterday.

The appeal, made by Max Hayes of Cleveland, delegate of the Typographical uinon, marked the introduction of the topic into the convention and was greeted with only mild applause by the delegates, the temper of the convention apparently opposing the proposition.

Then Spring Arrives

The pussy willow, probably more than any other tree, tells the people of both city and country when spring is here, says the American Tree association. During a brief period of spring it gives the chief touch of beauty to the landscape through its fine display of yellow blossoms that are visited by thousands of bees.

Prison Director Roc alone of all people believes in Quien's innocence, and as I sat with him, and he pressed a bell to give orders for Quien to be brought into the office with us, he told me he was pressing the ministers of war and justice to review the case.

Clairvaux, France, Oct. 12.—His face suddenly a sickening white, his eyes wide opened in terror, George Gaston Quien recoiled as if he had been hit when I mentioned to him the name of Edith Cavell.

"I am suffering a Calvary!" he cried. "I am not guilty!"

Here at Clairvaux penitentiary there were until recently two personalities.

One interested his fellow prisoners because he was an American, and because he had been a hero in war.

That was Bennett J. Doty, American, serving a sentence for desertion from the Foreign Legion.

On the prison records I saw Doty's citation for bravery:

"A Legionnaire of remarkable calm and sang froid; an extraordinary marksman. In the battle of Ressazm Syria, on October 7, 1925, he won general admiration by walking upright through enemy fire, indifferently returning shots as if on the rifle range."

The other personality, of course, was Quien. He spoke wonderingly.—for ordinarily visitors are not admitted to this rigorous penitentiary, immense, forbidding. Once it was a monastery. It was founded in the 12th century by St. Bernard.

It was easy to see how Quien had won his prison nickname of "Double Meter." He is nearly six feet six inches tall. He would attract attention anywhere.

Quien readily responded to several questions I asked him. Then I said:

"I want to ask you about Nurse Cavell."

Quien's huge frame seemed suddenly to collapse into a mass of unhealthy flesh. His face blanched. Cowering, he covered his face with his huge hands. Then his story came with a rush of broken sentences:

"I am not guilty! I am not guilty!

"If you knew the real story of my Calvary you would pity me.

"I have sinned often. I regret. But never—never—did I denounce Nurse Cavell."

Alone with his awful thoughts for nearly eight years, Quien appears to have constructed a holeproof defense.

"I am the victim of judicial errors," he continued. "It is my past history that has convicted me.

"My lawyer tried hard to save me, but he has lost interest. Now I never hear from him, and he does nothing to reopen my case.

"I am tired of fighting. I am becoming resigned to my fate.

"But I am not guilty.

"My life during the war was a drama. I escaped from the occupied territory to Holland, and I carried out numerous missions for the French military attache.

"For collaborating in Nurse Cavell's work I was twice condemned by the Germans, once to six months' imprisonment at Antwerp.

"Often I handled important military documents.

"I never was in the pay of the Germans.

"I lost because I had a double, tall as I and otherwise closely resembling me. He was named Cavier, and he was a German spy.

"Cavier succeeded into working into the circle that contained Nurse Cavell and others who eventually were shot. It was he who cost them their lives.

"Also Nurse Cavell had a dozen German nurses, any one of whom might have betrayed her.

"Nurse Cavell had with her, too, a German girl she had adopted, a 16-year-old child named Pauline. She was a loose-tongued though well meaning child, who gossiped constantly and could have talked too much.

"It is among those whom I have described that you must look for Nurse Cavell's denunciator.

"I was the victim of a hostile press campaign at a time when passions still were white hot.

"I swear I never touched a penny of German money.

"How unhappy I am! My parents have died. They left me their fortune of several hundred thousand francs, but of what good is it to me? I am 50, and I haven't much hope for the future.

"If I could get a good lawyer and tell him my story there would be a scandal."

There Quien broke down. Tears welled from his eyes, and he sobbed unreservedly. With his face buried in his hands, he was led back to his cell to serve his long sentence, as dead to the world as the nurse of whose betrayal he was convicted.

Monte Carlo Stage for Talmadge Story

Norma Talmadge is now appearing in a photoplay at the Park which will bring tears to the eyes of the fathers and mothers of present times who began their courtships back in the days when leg-o'-mutton sleeves, and bicycles built for two were the fashion.

Those who remember the Spanish-American war, the Paris Exposition of 1900, the Buffalo Fair of 1901 where President McKinley was shot, the Riviera of the days when everyone was singing "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo," will tremendously enjoy Norma's new picture, "The Lady."

"Service for Ladies" Up to Menjou Standard at Lyceum

An Adolphe Menjou vehicle is always refreshing. One goes to the theatre in a pleasant anticipatory frame of mind and is never disappointed. This is patricularly true of his latest Paramount comedy-drama "Service for Ladies" which is now showing at the Lyceum theatre.

The question therefore as to whether the Baptists of the state will continue to back Carleton remains undecided but will probably be settled Wednesday morning.

Dr. Riley said the charges presented Tuesday were those presented to the special committee appointed by the board to hear the same some months ago. The committee recommended through the board that decision on the matter go over for a year. This recommendation was the bone of contention.

Dr. Riley presented a substitute motion to the effect that students and funds be withheld from Carleton until such time as she came to a satisfactory evangelical base.

Senator Wells, Minneapolis, defended Dr. Riley's position and insisted upon immediate action. The opposition however to Dr. Riley's motion consumed practically all the time.

President—Mrs. Patee Russell Minneapolis.

First Vice President—Mrs. Earl V. Pierce, Minneapolis.

Second Vice President—Mrs. Charles Johnston, Minneapolis.

Secretary—Mrs. Robert Lansing, St. Paul.

Treasurer—Mrs. A. F. Gale, Minneapolis.

Billie Dove in "American Beauty"

That popular team of star and leading man, Billie Dove and Lloyd Hughes, will be seen together for the third time in the past year in First National's "American Beauty" which comes to the Lyceum theatre Thursday.

Real School Teacher Part of "Doug's" Company

When Douglas Fairbanks and his company of over one hundred people, including about a dozen children, rode daily to the San Fernando Valley where a massive "set" was constructed resembling the city of Los Angeles of about a century ago and where most of the outdoor scenes of "The Mark of Zorro" were filmed, arrangements were completed to have a school teacher accompany the throng. Thus when the children did not appear before the camera, a most diligent "schoolmarm" could always be seen within the range of the Sierra Madre Mountains, imparting the three "R's" to about a dozen embryo Thespians at the Park tomorrow.

PLEA FOR INDEPENDENT POLITICAL PARTY

Los Angeles, Oct. 12.—(UP)—A plea for an independent political party to serve the interests of city workers, farmers and progressives generally was made before the 47th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor late yesterday.

The appeal, made by Max Hayes of Cleveland, delegate of the Typographical uinon, marked the introduction of the topic into the convention and was greeted with only mild applause by the delegates, the temper of the convention apparently opposing the proposition.

Then Spring Arrives

The pussy willow, probably more than any other tree, tells the people of both city and country when spring is here, says the American Tree association. During a brief period of spring it gives the chief touch of beauty to the landscape through its fine display of yellow blossoms that are visited by thousands of bees.

NOT IN THE SCHOOL BOOKS

A LITTLE lesson to 3,000 freshmen, given the other day by President Coffman, shows that more things than Greek, biology and literature are taught at the state university, says the Fergus Falls Tribune. He suggested an examination, the answers and markings thereon to be left to each student for himself. The questions he asked were these:

"Are you man enough to get up promptly every morning, go to meals on time, reach your classes on time, and go to bed at a regular hour, without supervision or a reminder of any sort?

"Are you able to carry loose change in your pocket without spending it? Can you budget your money, meet your bills, and hold up your heads without sponging off your fellow students?

"Have you the strength of will and character to choose as companions those whom you would like to have as lifelong friends, and to shun the unworthy?

"Have you the will power to go off by yourselves every day and study your lessons until you know them without having anyone tell you to get to work?

"Have you the manhood, when another fellow's answer is within reach, to fail on an examination rather than obtain unlawful aid?"

With variations these questions might profitably be asked by every person to himself. President Coffman's comment that an approximate mark of 100 per cent in the above examination is needed for success in the university might be echoed in almost any line. His final hint to the students, however, savors of anti-climax: "Every time a student misses a class," he said, "it costs the state $1.25 and another $1.25 to your parents." Pupils would sometimes prefer to pay the state's loss twice over than to appear in classroom the morning after.

CHRISTIANITY ENDURES

WE listened the other evening to the report made by Dr. J. H. Franklin, of New York City, Foreign Secretary of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, as given at the Methodist church during the Baptist state convention.

The great point brought out is the fact, known in all ages, that Christianity endures. In fact, the church thrives on persecution. In his address he mentioned that interior missions of China, bereft of their American missionary heads, have continued to function with natives in charge.

Christianity, as taught by the missionaries, imbedded itself firmly in the hearts and souls of the converts. Willing to die for their faith, they have also been willing to live and work for it.

Chinese, conversant with religious matters, told Mr. Franklin that Christianity got a new lease of life in China after the Boxer rebellion and the same thing, they assured him, will happen after the present chaotic condition of China changes from a state of flux and comes to rest.

China is conservative, it is true, said the speaker and so would we be if we could trace family trees back centuries. Mr. Franklin's address on "Christian Missions in Chaotic China" was a thoughtful one, evincing much care in preparation and delivery and given by one who has the authority and experience to deliver such a message. He left the impress of hope and optimism that things will right themselves in China and the mission field will not be lost.

A TOWN'S BEST BOOSTER

THE Bemidji Daily Pioneer in an editorial observes, a writer in a current magazine writes that "if the newspaper is just a little better than its town, the latter is the gainer thereby."

Towns and their newspapers usually lag or lead together, adds an exchange. Progressive journalism is the unfailing tonic of the lethargic community, but it is equally true that a lifeless newspaper can seriously retard the development of its community.

There is no better community asset than a home newspaper equal to the needs of the community. While a poor newspaper is better than none to the individual reader, that does not hold true for the town.

What can a good newspaper do for its community? It can serve as the town's messenger to the outside world. It must take the leadership in all community projects if they are to be successful. It is the infallible line of communication between local government and citizens. It is to the newspaper that all organizations turn for assistance in public welfare movements and without that assistance they face failure.

The newspaper reaps the reward of its initiative by sharing in the general improvement of business and community affairs it has been instrumental in bringing about. The good newspaper deems it a pleasure to serve its community and its readers and is fully aware that it is only through giving a full measure of service that it can progress and prosper.

RULES FOR DRIVERS

SOME one writes a facetious story of what a driver means when he sticks out his arm. You may have noticed this incident and got all set to stop your car or expected the car ahead to make a turn.

Well, according to the observant motorist who has checked up the arm movement, an arm protruding from the car ahead means that the driver is:

Knocking ashes off his cigaret.
Going to turn to the left.
Telling a small boy to shut up; he won't buy any red pop.
Going to turn to the right.
Pointing out a scenic spot.
Going to back up.
Feeling for rain.
Telling his wife: "Heavens yes, the kitchen door is locked."
Saluting a passing motorist.
Going to stop.

It all sounds funny, but check up the list and see how many times you stuck out your arm and what did you mean when you did it.

SYNOPSIS

Emmett Murtough of Killanmaul, Ireland, emigrates to America and is followed by Sheila Kildare, to whom he is bethrothed, and her father. Sheila makes friends with the family of Rory O'Shea, a professional boxer whom Emmett scorns. Sheila begins to see through Murtough's boasting. Rory takes Sheila to Coney Island and for a trip in an automobile which inflames Murtough's jealousy. Rory is going away to camp to train for his coming fight with Campeau.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

"This fight will tell the tale. Win or lose, I'll know whether I'll ever go into the ring again. I might win; I've got a good chance, but to win wouldn't be proof that I am good enough to get any farther. I'm not like most fighters. They stick to it hoping they can get by with luck. I don't. I know that I've gone back a lot; I fought too many fights too early, before I was fully developed. I'd like to win because the money would give me a chance at something else."

"Wouldn't it be splendid if ye could get into business, like your brother Tim."

"I've thought of that and if I win this purse I'm going to ask Tim about it. If I don't win I'll have to get a job in something that has a future in it. Lots of ex-fighters stick around the game and become trainers or managers of other fighters, but I wouldn't want to do that. When I'm through I'm through for good."

"We will," promised Sheila as she ran up the stairs.

"I shouldn't think it would be as good as something steady and sure," Sheila said.

"You're right, and besides I'm beginning to want a home of my own and a wife and children. After all that's the best thing that life can give anybody."

"I love children," exclaimed Sheila.

"So do I."

"I saw that the way you acted with Tim's little ones."

"They're a fine pair," Rory said enthusiastically. "Tim's a lucky man with his family."

Each avoided personal conversation, but when they reached home and Sheila said good night Rory took her hand.

"I'll be away two months and I won't get a chance to see you again unless you and your father will visit the camp some Sunday."

"We will," promised Sheila as she ran up the stairs.

Old Tom Kildare had news for her. Emmett Murtough had decided to quit his job on the morrow. He was going into business with one of the members of the West Side Club. There was lots of money to be made in it. Some day of trucking work it was said Emmett was to learn to drive a truck. He would be a big man soon, Old Tom declared.

But Murtough had not told all the truth about the trucking business. True he would learn to drive a truck, but for the present he would be a guard, armed and ready to shoot to kill, if need be, because the loads in the covered vans he would ride were liquor. Emmett had drifted into a gang of bootleggers headed by Mannie Clocker. Clocker's crew had long been the bane of the local prohibition agents, but with graft and political pull he had managed to pursue his business practically unmolested. He had assured Murtough that there was no danger but that the men on the truck had to be prepared for any emergency. This Murtough had not told Kildare.

Sheila made little comment. She was filled with thoughts of the glorious night she had spent and Emmett's venture did not arouse much interest. She only asked her father if the work would be steady. Kildare told her that it was a business that did not require all of Murtough's time, that he would work only two or three nights a week and he would make from fifty to one hundred dollars a night depending upon the length of the trip.

"'Tis not good for any man to be loafing too much," said Sheila. And Old Tom flung back at her that he was working six days a week and making little over half as much as fifty dollars a week. "But it is regular," she insisted.

Murtough liked the job. The excitement of speeding at night the length of Long Island, or far into New Jersey with lights out suited the devil may care spirit that was his. It gave him more time to loaf about the Club and, of course, there was plenty to drink all for the taking. Some weeks he was paid as much as $150 but the money did him no good. He was invited into card games and he felt he could not refuse because they were members of the Club and members of Clocker's gang. Always he lost, for he knew nothing of cards or gambling. He learned to drive an automobile and was detailed to his own truck with another gunman as guard. Frequently a pilot car, a high powered roadster accompanied the truck. It was Emmett's business to keep the pilot car always in sight. Never must he let the red tail-lights pass out of his vision. Murtough had accomplished a dozen trips both as guard and as driver and had had no difficulty. Once only was he stopped but it was by a local constable and a ten dollar bill freed him of the possible ticket for speeding. The officer did not suspect that the van was loaded with contraband liquor.

He saw less and less of Sheila nowadays. And, Sheila was just as happy. Evenings when Murtough did drop in there was always argument about her marriage to Emmett and slurs cast at the absent Rory. The effect of Murtough's money making "business" was creating more discontent in the heart of Old Tom Kildare. The meagre wages he earned working for Tim O'Shea goaded his pride and he raged at fortune which permitted Emmett to succeed at what the old man believed was a legitimate job.

One night he returned home and announced that he had quit O'Shea. He would not be doing the dirty work of a laborer any longer, he declared, and it was now up to Sheila to marry Murtough.

"I'll never marry him an' 'tis a shame ye have no manhood in ye, I'll find work myself if need be but i'll never marry Emmett. Our savings are almost gone, too, an' 'tis little a girl can earn in this city, a girl that hasn't a trade or anything. Shame on ye, father, shame on ye."

"Oh, I'll find work that will suit my talents," the old man boasted. "But ye ought to be getting married an' settle down, just the same."

But even though Emmett took the old man to the club and introduced him to his friends there, those who were ignorant of the bootlegging business, Old Tom Kildare found no job that was to his liking. The savings were exhausted. Murtough lent them some money, but though he was paid a great deal, his gambling and the liquor he bought consumed most of his earnings and it was little that he could do for them.

A month after Rory O'Shea had left for Jimmy Tree's training camp Sheila started out to look for any kind of a position that would pay the rent and keep the table. It was far from the dream that Sheila had visioned when she left Killanmaul many months before.

CHAPTER VII
Murtough's Change of Heart

Nick's Restaurant in Ninth Avenue was the popular cafe in the neighborhood where the Kildares lived. It was owned by N. Acropolis, a Greek, who had started business with an old fashioned lunch wagon and now possessed this fast money making establishment. It was frequented by many members of the West Side Club, among them Emmett Murtough. Occasionally he had taken Sheila there for supper. Nick was a good restaurant keeper; he knew food values and he hired competent chefs. In the day time, from eleven o'clock until nine o'clock at night, he employed girls as waitresses. Men relieved them at that hour for the all night watch.

Sheila had answered a score of want advertisements but her lack of training and knowledge of any craft proved her to be unfit for any of them. The housekeeper of a hotel in the Forties, patronized by small time theatrical folk, had employed her as maid, but an experience with one of the male guests so frightened Sheila that she applied for no more hotel chamber work.

3 MEN AND WOMAN ARRESTED AS SUSPECTS IN BANK ROBBERY

Denver, Colo., Oct. 11.—(UP)—Three men and a woman were arrested here early today as suspected members of the gang which shot six persons in an attempt to rob the First National bank of Aurora, Colo. After shooting bystanders and bank customers, yesterday, the bandits fled from the Aurora bank in an automobile leaving $15,000 on the counter.

The persons arrested were George J. Berger, 23, his wife, 21, James Daly, 27, and Leonard Vazciney, 20, all of Denver.

Aurora officials have identified the three men as members of the gang which entered the bank, police said.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

A Child's Laxative which Mothers Can Rely On

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he constantly advised mothers to give only a harmless laxative which would help to establish natural bowel "regularity."

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin mothers have a regulating laxative which they can depend upon whenever a child is constipated, bilious, feverish or sick from a cold, indigestion or sour stomach. All children love its pleasant taste.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself how perfectly it cleanses and regulates the bowels of infants and children.

Dr. Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN

The little things

Away back in the year 1757, in his maxims prefixed to "Poor Richard's Almanac", Benjamin Franklin said: "For want of a nail, the shoe was lost; for want of a shoe, the horse was lost; and for want of a horse, the rider was lost." So you see the importance of a little thing like a horse-shoe nail!

If you are disposed to neglect the smaller advertisements in this paper, you are making a mistake. You are missing money-saving opportunities. You are missing important information about something that some day you are going to buy. You are throwing away your road-map and following your nose.

The big stores of today were little ones years ago. They used advertising space judiciously and became large. At first, their announcements were smaller than they are today. But those small advertisements told about real values, real savings for their customers.

In other words, the size of an advertisement is no indication of its importance to you. The message is the thing. Some of the most important merchandise news is often printed in tiny type. Even in the largest advertisements you will find small type. Read the small type as well as the big black type. Read the little advertisements as well as the large ones. It pays.

Advertisements come in all sizes—but the smallest one may carry the biggest news for you. Read them all

"Have you the strength of will and character to choose as companions those whom you would like to have as lifelong friends, and to shun the unworthy?

"Have you the will power to go off by yourselves every day and study your lessons until you know them without having anyone tell you to get to work?

"Have you the manhood, when another fellow's answer is within reach, to fail on an examination rather than obtain unlawful aid?"

With variations these questions might profitably be asked by every person to himself. President Coffman's comment that an approximate mark of 100 per cent in the above examination is needed for success in the university might be echoed in almost any line. His final hint to the students, however, savors of anti-climax: "Every time a student misses a class," he said, "it costs the state $1.25 and another $1.25 to your parents." Pupils would sometimes prefer to pay the state's loss twice over than to appear in classroom the morning after.

CHRISTIANITY ENDURES

WE listened the other evening to the report made by Dr. J. H. Franklin, of New York City, Foreign Secretary of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, as given at the Methodist church during the Baptist state convention.

The great point brought out is the fact, known in all ages, that Christianity endures. In fact, the church thrives on persecution. In his address he mentioned that interior missions of China, bereft of their American missionary heads, have continued to function with natives in charge.

Christianity, as taught by the missionaries, imbedded itself firmly in the hearts and souls of the converts. Willing to die for their faith, they have also been willing to live and work for it.

Chinese, conversant with religious matters, told Mr. Franklin that Christianity got a new lease of life in China after the Boxer rebellion and the same thing, they assured him, will happen after the present chaotic condition of China changes from a state of flux and comes to rest.

China is conservative, it is true, said the speaker and so would we be if we could trace family trees back centuries. Mr. Franklin's address on "Christian Missions in Chaotic China" was a thoughtful one, evincing much care in preparation and delivery and given by one who has the authority and experience to deliver such a message. He left the impress of hope and optimism that things will right themselves in China and the mission field will not be lost.

A TOWN'S BEST BOOSTER

THE Bemidji Daily Pioneer in an editorial observes, a writer in a current magazine writes that "if the newspaper is just a little better than its town, the latter is the gainer thereby."

Towns and their newspapers usually lag or lead together, adds an exchange. Progressive journalism is the unfailing tonic of the lethargic community, but it is equally true that a lifeless newspaper can seriously retard the development of its community.

There is no better community asset than a home newspaper equal to the needs of the community. While a poor newspaper is better than none to the individual reader, that does not hold true for the town.

What can a good newspaper do for its community? It can serve as the town's messenger to the outside world. It must take the leadership in all community projects if they are to be successful. It is the infallible line of communication between local government and citizens. It is to the newspaper that all organizations turn for assistance in public welfare movements and without that assistance they face failure.

The newspaper reaps the reward of its initiative by sharing in the general improvement of business and community affairs it has been instrumental in bringing about. The good newspaper deems it a pleasure to serve its community and its readers and is fully aware that it is only through giving a full measure of service that it can progress and prosper.

RULES FOR DRIVERS

SOME one writes a facetious story of what a driver means when he sticks out his arm. You may have noticed this incident and got all set to stop your car or expected the car ahead to make a turn.

Well, according to the observant motorist who has checked up the arm movement, an arm protruding from the car ahead means that the driver is:

Knocking ashes off his cigaret.
Going to turn to the left.
Telling a small boy to shut up; he won't buy any red pop.
Going to turn to the right.
Pointing out a scenic spot.
Going to back up.
Feeling for rain.
Telling his wife: "Heavens yes, the kitchen door is locked."
Saluting a passing motorist.
Going to stop.

It all sounds funny, but check up the list and see how many times you stuck out your arm and what did you mean when you did it.

SYNOPSIS

Emmett Murtough of Killanmaul, Ireland, emigrates to America and is followed by Sheila Kildare, to whom he is bethrothed, and her father. Sheila makes friends with the family of Rory O'Shea, a professional boxer whom Emmett scorns. Sheila begins to see through Murtough's boasting. Rory takes Sheila to Coney Island and for a trip in an automobile which inflames Murtough's jealousy. Rory is going away to camp to train for his coming fight with Campeau.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

"This fight will tell the tale. Win or lose, I'll know whether I'll ever go into the ring again. I might win; I've got a good chance, but to win wouldn't be proof that I am good enough to get any farther. I'm not like most fighters. They stick to it hoping they can get by with luck. I don't. I know that I've gone back a lot; I fought too many fights too early, before I was fully developed. I'd like to win because the money would give me a chance at something else."

"Wouldn't it be splendid if ye could get into business, like your brother Tim."

"I've thought of that and if I win this purse I'm going to ask Tim about it. If I don't win I'll have to get a job in something that has a future in it. Lots of ex-fighters stick around the game and become trainers or managers of other fighters, but I wouldn't want to do that. When I'm through I'm through for good."

"We will," promised Sheila as she ran up the stairs.

"I shouldn't think it would be as good as something steady and sure," Sheila said.

"You're right, and besides I'm beginning to want a home of my own and a wife and children. After all that's the best thing that life can give anybody."

"I love children," exclaimed Sheila.

"So do I."

"I saw that the way you acted with Tim's little ones."

"They're a fine pair," Rory said enthusiastically. "Tim's a lucky man with his family."

Each avoided personal conversation, but when they reached home and Sheila said good night Rory took her hand.

"I'll be away two months and I won't get a chance to see you again unless you and your father will visit the camp some Sunday."

"We will," promised Sheila as she ran up the stairs.

Old Tom Kildare had news for her. Emmett Murtough had decided to quit his job on the morrow. He was going into business with one of the members of the West Side Club. There was lots of money to be made in it. Some day of trucking work it was said Emmett was to learn to drive a truck. He would be a big man soon, Old Tom declared.

But Murtough had not told all the truth about the trucking business. True he would learn to drive a truck, but for the present he would be a guard, armed and ready to shoot to kill, if need be, because the loads in the covered vans he would ride were liquor. Emmett had drifted into a gang of bootleggers headed by Mannie Clocker. Clocker's crew had long been the bane of the local prohibition agents, but with graft and political pull he had managed to pursue his business practically unmolested. He had assured Murtough that there was no danger but that the men on the truck had to be prepared for any emergency. This Murtough had not told Kildare.

Sheila made little comment. She was filled with thoughts of the glorious night she had spent and Emmett's venture did not arouse much interest. She only asked her father if the work would be steady. Kildare told her that it was a business that did not require all of Murtough's time, that he would work only two or three nights a week and he would make from fifty to one hundred dollars a night depending upon the length of the trip.

"'Tis not good for any man to be loafing too much," said Sheila. And Old Tom flung back at her that he was working six days a week and making little over half as much as fifty dollars a week. "But it is regular," she insisted.

Murtough liked the job. The excitement of speeding at night the length of Long Island, or far into New Jersey with lights out suited the devil may care spirit that was his. It gave him more time to loaf about the Club and, of course, there was plenty to drink all for the taking. Some weeks he was paid as much as $150 but the money did him no good. He was invited into card games and he felt he could not refuse because they were members of the Club and members of Clocker's gang. Always he lost, for he knew nothing of cards or gambling. He learned to drive an automobile and was detailed to his own truck with another gunman as guard. Frequently a pilot car, a high powered roadster accompanied the truck. It was Emmett's business to keep the pilot car always in sight. Never must he let the red tail-lights pass out of his vision. Murtough had accomplished a dozen trips both as guard and as driver and had had no difficulty. Once only was he stopped but it was by a local constable and a ten dollar bill freed him of the possible ticket for speeding. The officer did not suspect that the van was loaded with contraband liquor.

He saw less and less of Sheila nowadays. And, Sheila was just as happy. Evenings when Murtough did drop in there was always argument about her marriage to Emmett and slurs cast at the absent Rory. The effect of Murtough's money making "business" was creating more discontent in the heart of Old Tom Kildare. The meagre wages he earned working for Tim O'Shea goaded his pride and he raged at fortune which permitted Emmett to succeed at what the old man believed was a legitimate job.

One night he returned home and announced that he had quit O'Shea. He would not be doing the dirty work of a laborer any longer, he declared, and it was now up to Sheila to marry Murtough.

"I'll never marry him an' 'tis a shame ye have no manhood in ye, I'll find work myself if need be but I'll never marry Emmett. Our savings are almost gone, too, an' 'tis little a girl can earn in this city, a girl that hasn't a trade or anything. Shame on ye, father, shame on ye."

"Oh, I'll find work that will suit my talents," the old man boasted. "But ye ought to be getting married an' settle down, just the same."

But even though Emmett took the old man to the club and introduced him to his friends there, those who were ignorant of the bootlegging business, Old Tom Kildare found no job that was to his liking. The savings were exhausted. Murtough lent them some money, but though he was paid a great deal, his gambling and the liquor he bought consumed most of his earnings and it was little that he could do for them.

A month after Rory O'Shea had left for Jimmy Tree's training camp Sheila started out to look for any kind of a position that would pay the rent and keep the table. It was far from the dream that Sheila had visioned when she left Killanmaul many months before.

CHAPTER VII
Murtough's Change of Heart

Nick's Restaurant in Ninth Avenue was the popular cafe in the neighborhood where the Kildares lived. It was owned by N. Acropolis, a Greek, who had started business with an old fashioned lunch wagon and now possessed this fast money making establishment. It was frequented by many members of the West Side Club, among them Emmett Murtough. Occasionally he had taken Sheila there for supper. Nick was a good restaurant keeper; he knew food values and he hired competent chefs. In the day time, from eleven o'clock until nine o'clock at night, he employed girls as waitresses. Men relieved them at that hour for the all night watch.

Sheila had answered a score of want advertisements but her lack of training and knowledge of any craft proved her to be unfit for any of them. The housekeeper of a hotel in the Forties, patronized by small time theatrical folk, had employed her as maid, but an experience with one of the male guests so frightened Sheila that she applied for no more hotel chamber work.

3 MEN AND WOMAN ARRESTED AS SUSPECTS IN BANK ROBBERY

Denver, Colo., Oct. 11.—(UP)—Three men and a woman were arrested here early today as suspected members of the gang which shot six persons in an attempt to rob the First National bank of Aurora, Colo. After shooting bystanders and bank customers, yesterday, the bandits fled from the Aurora bank in an automobile leaving $15,000 on the counter.

The persons arrested were George J. Berger, 23, his wife, 21, James Daly, 27, and Leonard Vazciney, 20, all of Denver.

Aurora officials have identified the three men as members of the gang which entered the bank, police said.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

A Child's Laxative which Mothers Can Rely On

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he constantly advised mothers to give only a harmless laxative which would help to establish natural bowel "regularity."

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin mothers have a regulating laxative which they can depend upon whenever a child is constipated, bilious, feverish or sick from a cold, indigestion or sour stomach. All children love its pleasant taste.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup" Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself how perfectly it cleanses and regulates the bowels of infants and children.

Dr. Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN

The little things

Away back in the year 1757, in his maxims prefixed to "Poor Richard's Almanac", Benjamin Franklin said: "For want of a nail, the shoe was lost; for want of a shoe, the horse was lost; and for want of a horse, the rider was lost." So you see the importance of a little thing like a horse-shoe nail!

If you are disposed to neglect the smaller advertisements in this paper, you are making a mistake. You are missing money-saving opportunities. You are missing important information about something that some day you are going to buy. You are throwing away your road-map and following your nose.

The big stores of today were little ones years ago. They used advertising space judiciously and became large. At first, their announcements were smaller than they are today. But those small advertisements told about real values, real savings for their customers.

In other words, the size of an advertisement is no indication of its importance to you. The message is the thing. Some of the most important merchandise news is often printed in tiny type. Even in the largest advertisements you will find small type. Read the small type as well as the big black type. Read the little advertisements as well as the large ones. It pays.

Advertisements come in all sizes—but the smallest one may carry the biggest news for you. Read them all

LOU GEHRIG HONORED IN THE AMERICAN LEAGUE TODAY

DECLARED MOST VALUABLE PLAYER SEASON OF 1927

BABE RUTH WAS INELIGIBLE UNDER TERMS OF AWARD

"COLUMBIA LOU" IS WELL DESERVING OF HONOR SHOWN

BY FRANK GETTY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Oct. 12—(UP)—It takes many things to make a great ball player—and Lou Gehrig has most of them.

The big first baseman of the New York Yankees has just been voted the most valuable player in the American League for the season of 1927.

Since Babe Ruth was ineligible under the rules which preclude the possibility of an American League player being named more than once for the honor, "Columbia Lou" well deserved the award.

Gehrig was the first choice of all but one of a committee of baseball writers representing the cities of the circuit, his nearest competitor being Harry Heilmann, Detroit outfielder, who led the league in hitting, and Ted Lyons, White Sox pitcher.

What manner of man is this youngster, just completing his third full major league season, yet named as the most valuable player in his league?

Well, for one thing, Lou Gehrig is what is known as a "ball players' player." In other words, he has won the confidence of his fellow Yankees as well as of the fans.

His hitting this past season has been phenomenal, and while he failed by a few points to win the batting championship, he stood third in the American league averages and drove in more runs than any other player. One hundred and seventy-five times during the season, Lou's big bat banged home a Yankee run—an average, it will be observed, of considerably better than a run a game.

Whenever an athlete achieves fame of this sort, it is customary to discover that he is good to his mother. Nevertheless, Lou Gehrig is a real boy, with a taste for fried eels.

Part of his success in home run hitting and all-around long distance slugging has been attributed to those eels, and many a small boy with an eye to sandlot fame has been known to make a brave attempt to down one of the darn things since Lou's preference became known.

Gehrig gave Ruth a great race for home run honors for a time during the latter part of the 1927 season, but a shipment of eels went astray on Morningside Heights one September day, and Lou fell into a batting slump from which he did not recover until the world series.

Lou hit .308 against the Pirates, contributing two doubles and two triples to his team's total of extra base hits. He fielded his position faultlessly.

Statisticians will tell you that there are greater fielding first basemen than this 24-year-old youngster, whose professional baseball experience has been confined to the Yankees and the Hartford club of the Eastern League. But ball players, especially infielders, and the Yankee infielders in particular, will tell you there's no one to whom they'd rather throw a baseball.

DIES AFTER 87 HOURS SLUMBER

Washington, Oct. 12.—(UP)—After 87 hours mysterious slumber, Samuel S. Dalton, 53 year old contractor, died here today.

His case, having none of the symptoms of sleeping sickness or paralysis, baffled five specialists.

Dalton went to sleep Saturday without complaining of any illness. Members of his family and nurses tried vainly to arouse him.

Physicians' only theory is that a brain abscess caused his sleep and death.

MOTOR BUS SKIDS, HITS TREE AND INJURES 9 PEOPLE

Metuchen, N. J., Oct. 12.—(UP)—A large motor bus carrying 18 passengers en route from Long Island City, N. Y., to Baltimore, Md., skidded on the West roadway near here today, struck a tree and was partially wrecked.

Nine persons were injured.

All of those injured were from New York except Guy Robinson, of Nashville, who was cut about the head.

FOOTBALL PLAYER FAINTS AT SIGHT OF BLOOD TRICKLE

Columbus, O., Oct. 12.—(UP)—Ohio State's "most hard-boiled" football player fainted at the sight of a trickle of blood on his foot last night, it developed today.

The young star, who has earned a reputation for being the "toughest" member of that squad of bronzed youths, has caused the team several penalties for rough playing.

Last night before practice he went into the training room at Ohio stadium to pare a corn. He pared too deep and the blood came.

The grid star passed out.

Doc Duffee, team physician, revived him.

"Blood always does me that way," the boy said.

EXPRESS DOUBT AS TO CHANNEL SWIMMER'S CLAIM

NOT A PERSON AT CAPE GRIZ FOUND WHO SAW HER ENTER WATER

ALLEGED START WAS MADE BETWEEN 5 AND 6 O'CLOCK, STILL DAYLIGHT

Cape Gris Nez, Oct. 12.—(UP)—Fishermen and the lighthouse keeper here expressed doubt today as to the truth of the claim of Dr. Dorothy Logan, of London, that she swam the English Channel in 13 hours and 10 minutes, thus bettering the record of Gertrude Ederle.

Not a person could be found here who saw her enter the water, though the alleged start was made between 5 and 6 o'clock when it was still light.

"I can guarantee that no swimmer started from Griz-Nez around that time," said the assistant lighthouse keeper, Popieul, "for my duties require me to sweep the sea with glasses and identify every vessel within sight.

"I also talked to numerous villagers and none of them saw anything of the swimmer or her boat."

FIGHT RESULTS

GRAND JURY CONSIDERS GEORGE REMUS CASE

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 12.—(UP)—The Hamilton county grand jury today considered an indictment charging wife murder against George Remus, millionaire bootlegger.

Evidence of nearly a score of witnesses was completed late yesterday. The indictment, if voted, will be returned Friday and a trial the first week in November will be ordered.

Meanwhile Remus continued efforts to build his defense that he killed his estranged wife because of her infidelity. Advertisements were inserted in newspapers here calling on banks and trust companies to advise him if they had any dealings with Mrs. Imogene Holmes Remus.

The coroner's inquest held late yesterday established that the murder of Mrs. Remus had been premediated.

CHARGED WITH RIFLING MAILS

St. Paul, Oct. 12.—(UP)—Charged with rifling the mails, Walter M. Heidinreich, 29, a mail carrier, is held today in lieu of $5,000 bonds. He was arrested late yesterday by postal inspectors. The amount of loot Heidinreich is alleged to have stolen was not announced.

FINDS OLD TOMBS OF "LIVING DEATH"

Explorer Continues Search at Constantinople.

Constantinople.—Treasures of the Byzantine empire and a tomb of living death have been discovered in an ancient cistern by Prof. Edmund Tilley, an American attached to Roberts college.

For two years this young American has been exploring the maze of ancient cisterns and mysterious passages beneath the city of Constantinople. Pits which the Turks always regarded merely as wells he has proved to be Byzantine cisterns, many of them rich in relics and art of the period of the Greek emperors.

His explorations have led him through a series of amazing adventures and have culminated with a grisly climax in his discovery of "the coffin cistern."

A Living Tomb.

Here Professor Tilley found not only the usual beautiful columns, with carved capitals rising in blackness from heaps of rubbish scurried over by rats, but a living tomb, as well. The first object his flashlight fell upon was an ancient coffin, and beside the coffin, lying on a bed of burlap and straw, was an old man, dying.

How many years the old man had made the black Byzantine pit his home and how he had managed to provide himself with a coffin are unsolved mysteries, for he died as the people whom the explorers had called for help carried him out of his living grave into the sunlight above.

Of the several hundred cisterns which make a labyrinth of the ancient city, underworld, many of the fifty-eight thus far located are still partly filled with water from mysterious unlocated sources. Most of these cisterns are accessible only by rope ladders swung down wellheads, and can be investigated only by wading through slimy mud and dirty, icy water.

The cold and foul air makes impossible a long stay below, and no attempt has yet been made to unearth the jewels and treasures of old Byzantium, which were buried in cisterns during riots and raids. LOU GEHRIG HONORED IN THE AMERICAN LEAGUE TODAY

BABE RUTH WAS INELIGIBLE UNDER TERMS OF AWARD

"COLUMBIA LOU" IS WELL DESERVING OF HONOR SHOWN

BY FRANK GETTY

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Oct. 12—(UP)—It takes many things to make a great ball player—and Lou Gehrig has most of them.

The big first baseman of the New York Yankees has just been voted the most valuable player in the American League for the season of 1927.

Since Babe Ruth was ineligible under the rules which preclude the possibility of an American League player being named more than once for the honor, "Columbia Lou" well deserved the award.

Gehrig was the first choice of all but one of a committee of baseball writers representing the cities of the circuit, his nearest competitor being Harry Heilmann, Detroit outfielder, who led the league in hitting, and Ted Lyons, White Sox pitcher.

What manner of man is this youngster, just completing his third full major league season, yet named as the most valuable player in his league?

Well, for one thing, Lou Gehrig is what is known as a "ball players' player." In other words, he has won the confidence of his fellow Yankees as well as of the fans.

His hitting this past season has been phenomenal, and while he failed by a few points to win the batting championship, he stood third in the American league averages and drove in more runs than any other player. One hundred and seventy-five times during the season, Lou's big bat banged home a Yankee run—an average, it will be observed, of considerably better than a run a game.

Whenever an athlete achieves fame of this sort, it is customary to discover that he is good to his mother. Nevertheless, Lou Gehrig is a real boy, with a taste for fried eels.

Part of his success in home run hitting and all-around long distance slugging has been attributed to those eels, and many a small boy with an eye to sandlot fame has been known to make a brave attempt to down one of the darn things since Lou's preference became known.

Gehrig gave Ruth a great race for home run honors for a time during the latter part of the 1927 season, but a shipment of eels went astray on Morningside Heights one September day, and Lou fell into a batting slump from which he did not recover until the world series.

Lou hit .308 against the Pirates, contributing two doubles and two triples to his team's total of extra base hits. He fielded his position faultlessly.

Statisticians will tell you that there are greater fielding first basemen than this 24-year-old youngster, whose professional baseball experience has been confined to the Yankees and the Hartford club of the Eastern League. But ball players, especially infielders, and the Yankee infielders in particular, will tell you there's no one to whom they'd rather throw a baseball.

DIES AFTER 87 HOURS SLUMBER

Washington, Oct. 12.—(UP)—After 87 hours mysterious slumber, Samuel S. Dalton, 53 year old contractor, died here today.

His case, having none of the symptoms of sleeping sickness or paralysis, baffled five specialists.

Dalton went to sleep Saturday without complaining of any illness. Members of his family and nurses tried vainly to arouse him.

Physicians' only theory is that a brain abscess caused his sleep and death.

MOTOR BUS SKIDS, HITS TREE AND INJURES 9 PEOPLE

Metuchen, N. J., Oct. 12.—(UP)—A large motor bus carrying 18 passengers en route from Long Island City, N. Y., to Baltimore, Md., skidded on the West roadway near here today, struck a tree and was partially wrecked.

Nine persons were injured.

All of those injured were from New York except Guy Robinson, of Nashville, who was cut about the head.

FOOTBALL PLAYER FAINTS AT SIGHT OF BLOOD TRICKLE

Columbus, O., Oct. 12.—(UP)—Ohio State's "most hard-boiled" football player fainted at the sight of a trickle of blood on his foot last night, it developed today.

The young star, who has earned a reputation for being the "toughest" member of that squad of bronzed youths, has caused the team several penalties for rough playing.

Last night before practice he went into the training room at Ohio stadium to pare a corn. He pared too deep and the blood came.

The grid star passed out.

Doc Duffee, team physician, revived him.

"Blood always does me that way," the boy said.

EXPRESS DOUBT AS TO CHANNEL SWIMMER'S CLAIM

ALLEGED START WAS MADE BETWEEN 5 AND 6 O'CLOCK, STILL DAYLIGHT

Cape Gris Nez, Oct. 12.—(UP)—Fishermen and the lighthouse keeper here expressed doubt today as to the truth of the claim of Dr. Dorothy Logan, of London, that she swam the English Channel in 13 hours and 10 minutes, thus bettering the record of Gertrude Ederle.

Not a person could be found here who saw her enter the water, though the alleged start was made between 5 and 6 o'clock when it was still light.

"I can guarantee that no swimmer started from Griz-Nez around that time," said the assistant lighthouse keeper, Popieul, "for my duties require me to sweep the sea with glasses and identify every vessel within sight.

"I also talked to numerous villagers and none of them saw anything of the swimmer or her boat."

FIGHT RESULTS

(By United Press)

New York—Louis (Kid) Kaplan, former featherweight champion, fighting as a lightweight, gave Tommy Cello of California a trouncing in a 10-round bout at the St. Nicholas arena last night. Kaplan weighed 133¼, Cello 134.

Klan won every round and in the fourth had Cello on the floor for a count of eight.

Kansas City — Sammy Mandell, world's lightweight champion, defeated Joe Trabon, Kansas City (10). Tiny Roebuck, Indian heavyweight, knocked out Frankie Day, Des Monies, (1). Leo Wax, Australian welterweight, outpointed Bobby Cox, Jacksonville, Fla., (10). Al Foreman, Chicago lightweight, knocked out Babe Pacito, Los Angeles, (5).

GRAND JURY CONSIDERS GEORGE REMUS CASE

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 12.—(UP)—The Hamilton county grand jury today considered an indictment charging wife murder against George Remus, millionaire bootlegger.

Evidence of nearly a score of witnesses was completed late yesterday. The indictment, if voted, will be returned Friday and a trial the first week in November will be ordered.

Meanwhile Remus continued efforts to build his defense that he killed his estranged wife because of her infidelity. Advertisements were inserted in newspapers here calling on banks and trust companies to advise him if they had any dealings with Mrs. Imogene Holmes Remus.

The coroner's inquest held late yesterday established that the murder of Mrs. Remus had been premediated.

13 YEAR OLD BOY FACES SERIOUS CHARGE

Upper Marlboro, Md., Oct. 12.—(UP)—A 13 year old boy today faced a possible death penalty on charges of a 9 year old girl.

The lad was indicted by a grand jury here last night. The Maryland law provides death for the offense.

The boy, with others, was bathing near Hyattsville two months ago when a group of girls passed. The bathers pursued the girls and the alleged attack followed.

CHARGED WITH RIFLING MAILS

St. Paul, Oct. 12.—(UP)—Charged with rifling the mails, Walter M. Heidinreich, 29, a amil carrier, is held today in lieu of $5,000 bonds. He was arrested alte yesterday by postal inspectors. The amount of loot Heidinreich is alleged to have stolen was not announced.

FINDS OLD TOMBS OF "LIVING DEATH"

Explorer Continues Search at Constantinople.

Constantinople. — Treasures of the Byzantine empire and a tomb of living death have been discovered in an ancient cistern by Prof. Edmund Tilley, an American attached to Roberts college.

For two years this young American has been exploring the maze of ancient cisterns and mysterious passages beneath the city of Constantinople. Pits which the Turks always regarded merely as wells he has proved to be Byzantine cisterns, many of them rich in relics and art of the period of the Greek emperors.

His explorations have led him through a series of amazing adventures and have culminated with a grisly climax in his discovery of "the coffin cistern."

A Living Tomb.

Here Professor Tilley found not only the usual beautiful columns, with carved capitals rising in blackness from heaps of rubbish scurried over by rats, but a living tomb, as well. The first object his flashlight fell upon was an ancient coffin, and beside the coffin, lying on a bed of burlap and straw, was an old man, dying.

How many years the old man had made the black Byzantine pit his home and how he had managed to provide himself with a coffin are unsolved mysteries, for he died as the people whom the explorers had called for help carried him out of his living grave into the sunlight above.

Of the several hundred cisterns which make a labyrinth of the ancient city, underworld, many of the fifty-eight thus far located are still partly filled with water from mysterious unlocated sources. Most of these cisterns are accessible only by rope ladders swung down wellheads, and can be investigated only by wading through slimy mud and dirty, icy water.

The cold and foul air makes impossible a long stay below, and no attempt has yet been made to unearth the jewels and treasures of old Byzantium, which were buried in cisterns during riots and raids. A Turkish soldier who has been assisting Professor Tilley discovered an antique Janissary sword sticking in the mud of one cistern.

Finds Blind Fish.

In one large cistern of thirty columns, situated beneath a modern Turkish hospital, Professor Tilley observed a peculiar blind fish.

The professor declares that the cisterns of Constantinople are the only unspoiled relics of Byzantine architecture. While all that the Byzantines built above ground has been destroyed, the cisterns, the solidity of which is a wonder of masonry, stand stanchly underground, untouched by earthquake, their porphyry and marble columns raising the unsolved question of why men in past ages created such beauty in the bowels of the earth.

SENIORS AND FACULTY ENJOY A PICNIC AT GILBERT LAKE

SENIORS' FIRST OUTING WAS A SUCCESS. EVERYBODY HAPPY

After the upper-classmen had been separated from the Glee Club, and from the group waiting to get passes for Little Falls, they were brought out to the lake in cars kindly furnished by the students and others.

The merry bunch made at once for the point, but could have saved themselves the energy, for a strong wind came up, and the clouds threatened almost as soon as the point had been reached, so the cars hurried the picnickers back to the pavilion.

The storm lasted but a few minutes, however, and these few were happily spent inside.

The class hired all of the boats, so many enjoyed an outing on the lake. It would be hard to tell who won in the races, but we had a pretty good idea who did.

Some of the boys made use of the football, and worked up a good appetite for supper which was served about six.

The lunch committee deserves much credit for the tasty and satisfying meal they supervised. After all were comfortably filled up, they wihtdrew to the inner pavilion and engaged in singing, cheering, Grand Marches, Virginia Reels, and games.

Most of the faculty were present and entered into the fun and thoroughly enjoyed it.

Coach and Mrs. Kasch were brought out after Mr. Kasch had given final instructions and practice to his team. Several of the football players came out for a few minutes, and gazed longingly at the peppy crowd, but had to return to Brainerd to rest up for the Saturday game. The lively Seniors cheered them, and gave them hearty wishes for their success, and then returned to their merriment.

The happy bunch finally wended their way homeward, regretfully and enjoyed as one always does the beauties of the river drive. The fun was continued at Little Falls on Saturday, where nearly all of the bunch of the 'night before' were to be found.

Lest We Forget

Prof. Wilson with his sprightly step and buoyant manner, despite his thinning hair and tired smile, has finished his faithful watch over the students of our public schools. He has watched several generations travel from the first grade to the maze of Latin verbs and finally, to the thrilling days of Commencement.

For years he had also fought for our school system, worked unceasingly for its improvement and given every minute of his time unselfishly to the thousand-and-one duties that were connected with his position.

He had encouraged boys and girls through their difficulties, praised them for their good work, and helped them to prepare for a useful place in society. Over and over again these former pupils had written to their old Prof. for reference, and he was never too busy to respond. Never had one of them received an honor or achieved success in his work without receiving congratulations and good cheer from the "Prof."

He was active in the affairs of the town, as well as the school, he has stood out as a leader in our community through these many years.

READS FROM RIGHT TO LEFT

The world was at peace—outside the sun shone brightly and twittering sparrows came and went among the stately maples that were lined in a column along the shady walk.

From within came the hum of an assembly, sometimes rising higher only to be stopped by an authorative tone from the front.

And now suddenly as an overhanging cloud blots out the sun, there came a silence—a silence pregnant with disaster, closely followed by a sort of wail, a long drawn out half meaningless sigh.

Then it broke; students sat stricken in their seats, teachers looked aghast and confusion reigned in the place of order. Above the tumult were heard hysterical gasps and bewildered and unbelieving exclamations came in at irregular intervals.

What had taken place? What motive caused this furore?

Why, believe it as you will, a sophomore had been found studying his lesson!

The Light That Failed And Why It Did It

Dear Readers:

I will now take my "graphite" in hand and endeavor to inscribe a few things of interest to relieve the monotony of your common-place existence, hoping the dictionary doesn't land too hard on your cranium. Don't take this seriously—needless to say, it doesn't mean a thing.

One thing we miss this year is Mr. Beresford's six feet plus to wisecrack about, but Lester Creger is still here.

You know, I heard a good one the other day about a Scotchman. I suppose you haven't heard it so I'll tell it. An Irishman asked a Scot what he thought about all the jokes about the Scotch economy. Well, the "highland laddie" answered that he didn't like them because they were all at his expense.

Here's a little story I heard once—Two little bugs were digging in earnest—poor Earnest!

That was quite a pep-fest Friday, wasn't it? "Yeah Bo!" and Billy is some yell leader.

Well, this isn't nearly as good as "Lil" Bertram but it's the best I can do.

Ye Ed. Note: Very gratifying!

SENIORS DISCUSS RINGS AT MEETING

MR. KELLY WAS THE CHOICE OF THE CLASS

The Seniors had a very important business meeting Monday afternoon in the old Senior room. The chief purpose of the meeting was to select the class ring. After much deliberation and discussion, a ring was chosen which seemed to satisfy the majority of the Seniors. No ring could be decided upon at first, as the boys were in favor of a heavier one than the girls wanted. It was suggested, however, that they see about getting a heavier shank on the same ring for the boys. This appeared to be a satisfactory decision to everyone.

The rest of the business consisted in deciding upon the photographer for the Senior pictures. Mr. Kelly was the choice of the class.

A few minutes after 4 o'clock, the meeting was adjourned, and the dignified Seniors walked solemnly and in perfect order, out of the room.

The result of the election was:

Reporters—Dorothy Kleven and Eva Hanski.

The first meeting will be held on Wednesday and the following chairmen were chosen for committees:

Who, What and Where

Mrs. Stone substituted for Miss Ersted and Miss Johnson who attended the Choral Contest at Crookston, at which the Brainerd Club won first prize.

Friends of "Ed" Heikkenen will be glad to hear that he is improving after an operation for appendicitis.

Miss Gipson was absent Thursday because of illness.

A pep fest was held Friday afternoon. After several announcements by Miss Tornstrom the meeting was turned over to Billy Johnstone who lead the assembly in some yells.

There was a Senior meeting Tuesday at 3:30 to decide on rings.

THE EDITOR SPEAKS—

Speaking of mass meetings, at a pep fest the idea is to brew pep but one shouldn't have such a terrible time arousing it. If everyone who felt enthusiastic would release his pent up enthusiasm in sort of a standardized code once in a while, especially when requested to do so by the cheer-leader, it would help. Some more pep at pep meetings—let's have it!

We heard a new yell at Little Falls Saturday, and it was all gold, too. Very gratifying. We could stand one more—and originality counts—short barky words is the cue.

Which brings us with startling smoothness back to the fact that originality counts in everything—and how, we might add. If you are writing a theme—be original; if you are in an executive position, let's see some originality; supposing you're choosing the winter outfit, measure it by your own ideas concerning snazziness; if you haven't rated a passing mark so far this year—be different!

When your initial bit of newness has been thoroughly mutilated, don't discourage yourself. Supposing the idea is A plus and you're sure of it still, dish it up differently and give it to them again. When you are convinced by opposing arguments, stiffen up, Stout Fella; a new idea is what you need. Every little start is a step towards originality—and that term covers your ability to put over old stuff in a new way.

Which brings us, ever so smoothly, to the fact that we would like your ideas concerning things at school—what's the matter with this and moreso—how can it be improved? We will even start a column and call it "The Incinerator," and you can sign your name A Gentle Reader, Anonymous, A Man With Both Feet On the Ground or Mary Brown, St. Louis, Mo. But we would like to have you express yourself.

And now we hear sweet strains from our radio, "Flapperette," "Bye, Bye Pretty Baby," "Barbara.' Good Night, we hope you are slipping well tonight.

SOPHS' NOMINATING COMMITTEE GETS BUSY, SELECTING CANDIDATES

A nominating committee has been chosen by Mr. Johnson, the class adviser, to select the candidates for the offices of the Sophomore class. The new rule made this year requires all underclass officers to be elected after the first six weeks. This is done to keep all students with low marks out of office. The committee hopes to have the candidates selected next week.

HI-Y SHIELD GETS A PLACE IN ASSEMBLY

The other morning as I came into the assembly I noticed something shiny hanging on the wall. Being curious, I went to investigate. When I came up to it I found that it was only a piece of wood shaped like a shield and it had on it a square piece of bronze-colored metal. On this metal were two inscriptions—the first engraved in large letters was "Hi-Y Service Shield." Under this inscription was the name, "Mark Patterson" in smaller letters. To some this means nothing because they know nothing of the meaning—to others it means a great deal. For those who do not know the meaning I will explain it. Last year the faculty and the members of the Hi-Y club elected one of the club members whom they thought promoted the Hi-Y standards the most. Mark Patterson was chosen for this and his name was engraved on the Hi-Y Service Shield.

We now have this shield hanging in the Senior part of the assembly. We feel proud of it for this is the first year we have had the shield. It is a great honor to have one's name engraved on it and the boys this year should try to do their best towards getting their name there.

THE BLUE AND WHITE GRIDDERS OVERWHELM LITTLE FALLS, 31-6

PEGGY SAYS—

Since you last heard from me there has been quite a happening. For instance, the Junior election and the Senior picnic. But what is going to happen is of more importance. We're going to have the six weeks' examinations next week, to which all of our students are looking forward with so much hopes. I say hopes because most of us hope that we get passing marks. The rest aren't worrying so much because they are the honor students.

Next, we are going to beat Little Falls all to smash, maybe even worse than we did Staples. We are going to break right through their line at least twice and they aren't going to go through our lines at all, making the score at least 12-0 in our favor.

The Senior picnic tomorrow is really quite an event for them because it is to be held at the conventional Freshmen meeting place—Gilbert Lake.

I hear the Commercial Club has elected their officers and plan to have a party next Wednesday night. My, but it does seem as though we are going to have lots of good times this year after all. With such a slow beginning, we all had taken on a pretty dreary outlook on life.

Not much now but next time—

CARL ZAPFFE IS JUNIOR PRESIDENT

VOTE TAKEN THREE TIMES BEFORE SELECTION IS MADE

A crowd of Juniors gathered in the Assembly Wednesday night for the first great event of the year, which is the election of class officers. There were fifty-one Juniors present.

William McClenahan received 24 votes for president and Carl Zapffe 23. As this gave neither a majority it was decided that another election would be necessary. Most of the crowd left before it was over, so we were compelled to wait until Thursday, the first half-hour. The second time was a tie so that a third vote resulted. The majority favored Carl Zapffe as president and William as vice president.

Kathryn Allbright was elected secretary and Hugh McCaffrey and Clarence Dutkowski sergeant-at-arms. Malcolm Ellison was elected treasurer by a large majority. Malcolm has held that office for the two previous years also.

THE HI-Y CLUB HAZES THEIR NEW MEMBERS

The second regular meeting of the Brainerd Hi-Y was held in the library of the Y. M. C. A. Wednesday evening. After the supper and song fest an initiation was held in the upstairs room of the Y. The new boys, numbering about fourteen, were made to roll peanuts across the room with their noses. This, although it seemed funny to the old members, was a vrey serious matter made only partly humorous by Ross Olmsted falling on his peanut and breaking it, thus making it impossible for him to continue the race. Then followed a guessing contest in which the winner, Joe Heald, was awarded a bag of peanuts. The meeting adjourned at 7:30 o'clock.

LITTLE FALLS FAILS TO MAKE AERIAL ATTACK EFFECTIVE

Brainerd defeated Little Falls 31-6 at Little Falls last Saturday. Practically the whole game was played on a wet field during a rain and snow storm.

It was the case of a fast starting outfit, possessed with a well planned attack, meeting a slow charging team whose offensive assets were mainly an abundance of passes. These worked for a while, long enough to net one touchdown, but later were unsuccessful.

Brainerd won the toss and decided to receive. After an attempt for a line plunge, Hautala punted. The punt was downed deep in Little Falls territory so they decided to return it. A bad return gave Brainerd twenty yards. Brainerd then took the ball for a touchdown, Swanson carrying the ball over. A pass was completed for the extra point.

The other touchdowns for Brainerd were made by: Hautala, two on line plunges, one on an intercepted pass; Buscher returned a punt and showed some nice open field running.

The lineup:

Guin, le; LaCourse, lt; Greener, lg; Ellison, c; Hanson, rg; Creger, rt; Barnes, re; Buscher, qb; Swanson and Hautala, hb; Fuller, fb.

Substitutes: Welliver for LaCourse; Goedderz for Barnes; Fox for Ellison; A. Hautala for Fuller; Wise for Buscher; Buscher for Swanson; Viken for Creger.

Brainerd plays Crosby-Ironton here, next Saturday. Crosby-Ironton is considered one of the best and most powerful teams of the district having been undefeated as Brainerd has, so a hard fought battle is sure to be waged.

EXCHANGE

So far from the different High Schools we have received the following exchanges:

Those High School Cliques

In nearly every school there seems to be a growing epidemic of cliques or sets, generally composed of persons who feel themselves just a little superior to the rest of the student body. Each clique makes it a point to snub members of every other clique and those who are "out of it." Each, even though it is often made up of the poorest students in the school, tries to run all the school activities. These cliques are just a petty example of Old World class distinction; so let's stop them. Let's made our school too big and too friendly to tolerate such narrowness.—Anokahi.

We are glad to welcome all our former exchanges as well as the new ones. The Brainonian is especially pleased to see that the International Falls High is starting a school paper this year.

Our Team

This year we have a football squad

And down the field so long and broad
Just watch them take that ball.

You simply can't remain serene
And see them do their stuff.

Now isn't that enough?

So let's go out to every game,
And if we win or lose,
We'll cheer for victory just the same
And show we've pep to use.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL PROSPECTS ARE GOOD

In looking ahead, Coach Reinertson predicts a very successful year for the girls' basketball team. She has with her some of the "men" from last year's team.

They are:

Dorothy Kleven, jumping forward, Hilda Dyvik, forward, Kathleen Early, forward on last year's team but practicing as hard for this year's, Margaret Jackson, guard, Charlotte Peters, guard, but practicing as forward, and Irene Molstad, forward. When these "men" get in working condition, Miss Reinertson hopes she will have as invincible team.

Miss Reinertson is very sorry to have lost some of her best players in the graduating class. The ones to graduate were:

Helen Beggs, forward and captain, Marion Liners, guard, Grace Alzant, guard and forward, and Alta Storm, guard. Come on girls; somebody has to take the places left vacant.

Father and Son Club Meets

Now it seems (as Richard tells us) that Mr. Ebert, being blessed with some of the wit hitherto displayed by his young hopeful, is always a step to the fore should it come to extemporaneous jest and it is our Richard's one ambition to best him.

And thus it happened that upon arrival of a friend, Mr. Ebert said to his son, "What are reading there, Dick?" This query was greeted with, "Oh, I'm reading 'The Cat's Paw'."

"Hm, must be a very touching book."

"Yes, father, it has a great deal of feeling."

THE FRENCH LESSON

"Je ne sais pas mes lecons,"
That's what French pupils say.
For "I don't know my lessons,"
They choose the harder way.

There is a "ma" and "pa" in French,
M-a and p-a-s,
And the meaning of "Que vous etes Betes!"
I'll bet you could not guess.

Un, deux, trois, quatre, cinq, six, sept—
The numbers up to seven.
Huit and neuf and dix and onze—
The numbers rise to 'leven.

Lessons in French are interesting;
French really is not hard—
And, folks, before I forget it,
After eight-thirty you're "tards."

SENIORS AND FACULTY ENJOY A PICNIC AT GILBERT LAKE

After the upper-classmen had been separated from the Glee Club, and from the group waiting to get passes for Little Falls, they were brought out to the lake in cars kindly furnished by the students and others.

The merry bunch made at once for the point, but could have saved themselves the energy, for a strong wind came up, and the clouds threatened almost as soon as the point had been reached, so the cars hurried the picnickers back to the pavilion.

The storm lasted but a few minutes, however, and these few were happily spent inside.

The class hired all of the boats, so many enjoyed an outing on the lake. It would be hard to tell who won in the races, but we had a pretty good idea who did.

Some of the boys made use of the football, and worked up a good appetite for supper which was served about six.

The lunch committee deserves much credit for the tasty and satisfying meal they supervised. After all were comfortably filled up, they wihtdrew to the inner pavilion and engaged in singing, cheering, Grand Marches, Virginia Reels, and games.

Most of the faculty were present and entered into the fun and thoroughly enjoyed it.

Coach and Mrs. Kasch were brought out after Mr. Kasch had given final instructions and practice to his team. Several of the football players came out for a few minutes, and gazed longingly at the peppy crowd, but had to return to Brainerd to rest up for the Saturday game. The lively Seniors cheered them, and gave them hearty wishes for their success, and then returned to their merriment.

The happy bunch finally wended their way homeward, regretfully and enjoyed as one always does the beauties of the river drive. The fun was continued at Little Falls on Saturday, where nearly all of the bunch of the 'night before' were to be found.

Lest We Forget

Prof. Wilson with his sprightly step and buoyant manner, despite his thinning hair and tired smile, has finished his faithful watch over the students of our public schools. He has watched several generations travel from the first grade to the maze of Latin verbs and finally, to the thrilling days of Commencement.

For years he had also fought for our school system, worked unceasingly for its improvement and given every minute of his time unselfishly to the thousand-and-one duties that were connected with his position.

He had encouraged boys and girls through their difficulties, praised them for their good work, and helped them to prepare for a useful place in society. Over and over again these former pupils had written to their old Prof. for reference, and he was never too busy to respond. Never had one of them received an honor or achieved success in his work without receiving congratulations and good cheer from the "Prof."

He was active in the affairs of the town, as well as the school, he has stood out as a leader in our community through these many years.

The world was at peace—outside the sun shone brightly and twittering sparrows came and went among the stately maples that were lined in a column along the shady walk.

From within came the hum of an assembly, sometimes rising higher only to be stopped by an authorative tone from the front.

And now suddenly as an overhanging cloud blots out the sun, there came a silence—a silence pregnant with disaster, closely followed by a sort of wail, a long drawn out half meaningless sigh.

Then it broke; students sat stricken in their seats, teachers looked aghast and confusion reigned in the place of order. Above the tumult were heard hysterical gasps and bewildered and unbelieving exclamations came in at irregular intervals.

What had taken place? What motive caused this furore?

Why, believe it as you will, a sophomore had been found studying his lesson!

The Light That Failed And Why It Did It

Dear Readers:

I will now take my "graphite" in hand and endeavor to inscribe a few things of interest to relieve the monotony of your common-place existence, hoping the dictionary doesn't land too hard on your cranium. Don't take this seriously—needless to say, it doesn't mean a thing.

One thing we miss this year is Mr. Beresford's six feet plus to wisecrack about, but Lester Creger is still here.

You know, I heard a good one the other day about a Scotchman. I suppose you haven't heard it so I'll tell it. An Irishman asked a Scot what he thought about all the jokes about the Scotch economy. Well, the "highland laddie" answered that he didn't like them because they were all at his expense.

Here's a little story I heard once—Two little bugs were digging in earnest—poor Earnest!

Well, this isn't nearly as good as "Lil" Bertram but it's the best I can do.

Ye Ed. Note: Very gratifying!

SENIORS DISCUSS RINGS AT MEETING

MR. KELLY WAS THE CHOICE OF THE CLASS

The Seniors had a very important business meeting Monday afternoon in the old Senior room. The chief purpose of the meeting was to select the class ring. After much deliberation and discussion, a ring was chosen which seemed to satisfy the majority of the Seniors. No ring could be decided upon at first, as the boys were in favor of a heavier one than the girls wanted. It was suggested, however, that they see about getting a heavier shank on the same ring for the boys. This appeared to be a satisfactory decision to everyone.

The rest of the business consisted in deciding upon the photographer for the Senior pictures. Mr. Kelly was the choice of the class.

A few minutes after 4 o'clock, the meeting was adjourned, and the dignified Seniors walked solemnly and in perfect order, out of the room.

JOE GREENER HEADS THE COMMERCIAL CLUB

The result of the election was:

President—Joe Greener.
Secretary—Elsie Swanson.
Treasurer—Henry Hanson.
Reporters—Dorothy Kleven and Eva Hanski.

The first meeting will be held on Wednesday and the following chairmen were chosen for committees:

Entertainment—Ethel Burns.
Program—Martha Remmels.

Who, What and Where

The red letter days of many students are here. Exams began yesterday.

Mrs. Stone substituted for Miss Ersted and Miss Johnson who attended the Choral Contest at Crookston, at which the Brainerd Club won first prize.

Friends of "Ed" Heikkenen will be glad to hear that he is improving after an operation for appendicitis.

Miss Gipson was absent Thursday because of illness.

A pep fest was held Friday afternoon. After several announcements by Miss Tornstrom the meeting was turned over to Billy Johnstone who lead the assembly in some yells.

There was a Senior meeting Tuesday at 3:30 to decide on rings.

THE EDITOR SPEAKS—

Speaking of mass meetings, at a pep fest the idea is to brew pep but one shouldn't have such a terrible time arousing it. If everyone who felt enthusiastic would release his pent up enthusiasm in sort of a standardized code once in a while, especially when requested to do so by the cheer-leader, it would help. Some more pep at pep meetings—let's have it!

We heard a new yell at Little Falls Saturday, and it was all gold, too. Very gratifying. We could stand one more—and originality counts—short barky words is the cue.

Which brings us with startling smoothness back to the fact that originality counts in everything—and how, we might add. If you are writing a theme—be original; if you are in an executive position, let's see some originality; supposing you're choosing the winter outfit, measure it by your own ideas concerning snazziness; if you haven't rated a passing mark so far this year—be different!

When your initial bit of newness has been thoroughly mutilated, don't discourage yourself. Supposing the idea is A plus and you're sure of it still, dish it up differently and give it to them again. When you are convinced by opposing arguments, stiffen up, Stout Fella; a new idea is what you need. Every little start is a step towards originality—and that term covers your ability to put over old stuff in a new way.

Which brings us, ever so smoothly, to the fact that we would like your ideas concerning things at school—what's the matter with this and moreso—how can it be improved? We will even start a column and call it "The Incinerator," and you can sign your name A Gentle Reader, Anonymous, A Man With Both Feet On the Ground or Mary Brown, St. Louis, Mo. But we would like to have you express yourself.

And now we hear sweet strains from our radio, "Flapperette," "Bye, Bye Pretty Baby," "Barbara.' Good Night, we hope you are slipping well tonight.

Fresh-Soph Elections
Following six weeks exams

Class and Club Presidents, Faculty, Athletic Directors: Leave all notices for this column in the Brainonian drawer, H. S. office. Mark notices "Bulletin Board." Deadline is 9 A. M., Mondays.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL PROSPECTS ARE GOOD

They are:

Dorothy Kleven, jumping forward, Hilda Dyvik, forward, Kathleen Early, forward on last year's team but practicing as hard for this year's, Margaret Jackson, guard, Charlotte Peters, guard, but practicing as forward, and Irene Molstad, forward. When these "men" get in working condition, Miss Reinertson hopes she will have as invincible team.

Miss Reinertson is very sorry to have lost some of her best players in the graduating class. The ones to graduate were:

Helen Beggs, forward and captain, Marion Liners, guard, Grace Alzant, guard and forward, and Alta Storm, guard. Come on girls; somebody has to take the places left vacant.

HUMOR

Native: O, this is the dead-letter office!

* * *

Frosh: Why is milk so blue here?

Soph: Because it comes from discontented cows.

* * *

Miss Graham, in Modern History: What were the three small countries of Spain before 1400 A. D.?

L. Wood: Portugal, dragon and castile soap.

* * *

Frosh: Could you tell me, kind sir, how I can get green paint off my hands?

Soph: Have you tried selling it at a reduced price?

* * *

A school boy who had taken his Ford to school on a cold winter day, was covering it with a blanket. A small boy standing beside, said: "Don't cover it up, mister, I saw what it was."

Father and Son Club Meets

Now it seems (as Richard tells us) that Mr. Ebert, being blessed with some of the wit hitherto displayed by his young hopeful, is always a step to the fore should it come to extemporaneous jest and it is our Richard's one ambition to best him.

And thus it happened that upon arrival of a friend, Mr. Ebert said to his son, "What are reading there, Dick?" This query was greeted with, "Oh, I'm reading 'The Cat's Paw'."

"Hm, must be a very touching book."

"Yes, father, it has a great deal of feeling."

THE FRENCH LESSON

"Je ne sais pas mes lecons,"
That's what French pupils say.
For "I don't know my lessons,"
They choose the harder way.

There is a "ma" and "pa" in French,
M-a and p-a-s,
And the meaning of "Que vous etes Betes!"
I'll bet you could not guess.

Un, deux, trois, quatre, cinq, six, sept—
The numbers up to seven.
Huit and neuf and dix and onze—
The numbers rise to 'leven.

Lessons in French are interesting;
French really is not hard—
And, folks, before I forget it,
After eight-thirty you're "tards."

CAR THIEVES ATTEMPT TO BURGLARIZE STORE

Two Cars Stolen Last Night by Same Party Recovered This Morning

FAMILY WATCHES PAIR

Wife Forbids Husband to Notify Police; Afraid He Might be Shot

Two car thieves who also attempted to burglarize a store got nothing for their efforts last night and may now have been behind the bars had not a wife forbidden her husband who witnessed the attempted robbery to leave the house and notify the police for fear of getting shot.

The car thieves started out on their night rambling by breaking into the garage of Fred Cartwright, 309 Third avenue N. E. and stealing his Essex coach. Police are of the opinion that the thieves then drove to Anderson Mercantile Co., broke a window in the store and tried in vain to break in the front and rear doors of the store. At the sound of the crash of glass a family living nearby was awakened and the husband sat quietly at the bedroom window for over one hour watching the attempted robbery, he being ordered by his wife not to leave the house for fear of getting shot.

Unable to enter the store the men broke into V. F. Anderson's garage but did not take the car there as it did not suit their fancy. They then returned to the stolen car in front of the store. Being unable to start the car and running down the battery in their attempt they stole the Maxwell car of W. L. Peabody at 607 N. E. 8th avenue from the side of the house and made their getaway.

Mr. Cartwright's car was recovered this morning in front of V. F. Anderson's store and W. L. Peabody's car was found where it had been deserted in the alley at the rear of Kaatz's store in N. E. Brainerd.

CHAMBER MEMBERS AND LIONS TO MEET

Will Gather in Chamber of Commerce Rooms for Dinner at 6:15 O'clock

RECEIVE SPECIAL REPORTS

T. J. Linnell Will Address Gathering on Fire Prevention Work

The Chamber of Commerce and the Lions club will gather tonight for a joint meeting in the Chamber rooms preceded b a dinner at 6:15 o'clock.

An athletic park report on the municipal field will be received.

Later in the evening T. J. Linnell, special agent for the Fire Prevention League will deliver an address on the protection of property from fire in accordance with Fire Prevention Week.

Mr. Linnell addressed the high school students this morning and was scheduled to appear at the grade schools this afternoon.

The subject of Mr. Linnell's talk tonight is "The Relation of Fire Prevention to the American Citizen."

"The opening thought to be expressed will be that United States is suffering from a disease called "fire waste." The cause of the disease for the greater part is carelessness and the only cure we know of is fire prevention. In diagnosing disease, in discovering what it is, the usual procedure would be to learn how bad we have the disease, with an idea of bringing this out forcibly. A few statistics in regard to fire waste follows: 1903, fire loss in U. S. A., $145,000,000; 1913, $203,000,000; 1923, $535,000,000; 1926, $560,000,000. As the fire underwriters estimate that only fifty percent of the destroyed property is insured this would bring this loss to over one billion dollars a year. If it increases as fast in the next twenty years as it did in the past twenty years it will reach over four billion dollars," said Mr. Thomas G. Linnell, of Minneapolis.

"Unless this fire waste is reduced within ten years this will be one of the largest political issues in the country. The comparision of our fire loss with other countries on a per capita basis follow: United States fire destroyed for every person last year, $5.23; in England, 72 cents; France, 49 cents; Germany, 28 cents; Italy [illegible] Switzerland, 15 cents. The amount of this loss in the United States each year is equal to a sum of five times the value of all the gold and silver mined in the country that year. It is also equal to a sum three times as great as would be necessary to complete the St. Lawrence-Great Lakes waterway, and including a canal connecting the Great Lakes with the Mississippi river and a completion of a program for the prevention of floods in the lower Mississippi river area such as they had this year.

"Last year the loss to human life by fire was 15,000 and 85 percent of those were women and children. The fires occurred mostly in schools on an average of five schools burned in the United States every day.

"The fire loss in Minnesota last year was ten million dollars. There are 137 forest fires in the United States daily with approximately ten million acres burned. One fifth of all forest fires are started by careless campers, two fifths were started by industrial carelessness," concluded Mr. Linnell.

Archie Verbeck of Detroit Lakes, who won the Bible study contest at Mound Assembly in connection with the Baptist State Convention now on its last day of session. He will receive his award tonight.

Leaders Corps Formed to Assist Secretary in Coming Winter Program

Members of the Tigers club under direction of Lyle Mayo, president, did a piece of good service for the community by delivering posters regarding fire prevention week, throughout the business district.

The Northern Pacific shops, which have made a new hot water boiler for the Y. M. C. A. are installing it today at the "Y." With a new full time janitor on duty at the "Y." hot shower baths will now be available at all times.

A leaders corps has been formed at the "Y." consisting of high school boys who will assist Mr. Peterson, secretary, with the program this winter. Ralph Anderson, Otto Dahl, John Merrill and Lyle Mayo have been selected. Lester Peterson, a high school graduate also assists a few evenings a week.

I. L. Peterson, secretary of the "Y." was invited to speak at the Parent Teachers association of Lincoln school last evening.

The Hi-Y club has been invited to adjourn after supper at the "Y." this evening and attend the joint program at the Chamber of Commerce.

CLAIMS PUBLIC IS TALKED TO DEATH

Rev. R. J. Long Addresses Brainerd Ministers Association at Opening Meeting

PERSONAL CONTACT NEEDED

Discussed "The Psychology of Salesmanship As Applied to the Ministry"

At the opening session of the Brainerd Ministers' association in the Chamber of Commerce last Monday, the order of the day was the paper presented by Rev. Robert J. Long of the Protestant Episcopal church on the subject, "The Psychology of Salesmanship as applied to the Christian Ministry."

Rev. Long lead off with the general idea that the Christian ministry had nothing to sell, in the general meaning of the term, but every thing to give as was shown in the life of the master, who even in boyhood, prepared himself to be about his father's business. The minister goes forth with a divine commission and a divine message, but also with the divine aid.

No real minister of Christ thinks of putting his church first but with the larger thought of putting the kingdom of God first. Rev. Long spoke of the far reaching influence of disinterested service showing that whenever a church was spiritual and Christlike in its program all the other churches prospered because of the disinterested loyalty to Christian ideals thus shown.

Large use of the public press was also a real power in acquainting folks with Christ, but such publicity must be truthful, sane and dignified said Rev. Long. The greatest kind of salesmanship is no longer the hippodrome revival meeting, but the personal contacts, winning men one by one. Rev. Long thought the public had been talked to death, yet, whenever a minister was called on to speak at a banquet or club he should do so in the most felicitous manner possible but always remembering that he especially represents Christ and should somewhere in his talk speak a good word for the master. It was a strong plea for reality in the minister's private life and the sanest personal evangelism by ministers, individually and collectively.

N. P. INSTALLS BOILER

Leaders Corps Formed to Assist Secretary in Coming Winter Program

Members of the Tigers club under direction of Lyle Mayo, president, did a piece of good service for the community by delivering posters regarding fire prevention week, throughout the business district.

The Northern Pacific shops, which have made a new hot water boiler for the Y. M. C. A. are installing it today at the "Y." With a new full time janitor on duty at the "Y." hot shower baths will now be available at all times.

A leaders corps has been formed at the "Y." consisting of high school boys who will assist Mr. Peterson, secretary, with the program this winter. Ralph Anderson, Otto Dahl, John Merrill and Lyle Mayo have been selected. Lester Peterson, a high school graduate also assists a few evenings a week.

I. L. Peterson, secretary of the "Y." was invited to speak at the Parent Teachers association of Lincoln school last evening.

The Hi-Y club has been invited to adjourn after supper at the "Y." this evening and attend the joint program at the Chamber of Commerce.

CLAIMS PUBLIC IS TALKED TO DEATH

Rev. R. J. Long Addresses Brainerd Ministers Association at Opening Meeting

PERSONAL CONTACT NEEDED

Discussed "The Psychology of Salesmanship As Applied to the Ministry"

At the opening session of the Brainerd Ministers' association in the Chamber of Commerce last Monday, the order of the day was the paper presented by Rev. Robert J. Long of the Protestant Episcopal church on the subject, "The Psychology of Salesmanship as applied to the Christian Ministry."

Rev. Long lead off with the general idea that the Christian ministry had nothing to sell, in the general meaning of the term, but every thing to give as was shown in the life of the master, who even in boyhood, prepared himself to be about his father's business. The minister goes forth with a divine commission and a divine message, but also with the divine aid.

No real minister of Christ thinks of putting his church first but with the larger thought of putting the kingdom of God first. Rev. Long spoke of the far reaching influence of disinterested service showing that whenever a church was spiritual and Christlike in its program all the other churches prospered because of the disinterested loyalty to Christian ideals thus shown.

Large use of the public press was also a real power in acquainting folks with Christ, but such publicity must be truthful, sane and dignified said Rev. Long. The greatest kind of salesmanship is no longer the hippodrome revival meeting, but the personal contacts, winning men one by one. Rev. Long thought the public had been talked to death, yet, whenever a minister was called on to speak at a banquet or club he should do so in the most felicitous manner possible but always remembering that he especially represents Christ and should somewhere in his talk speak a good word for the master. It was a strong plea for reality in the minister's private life and the sanest personal evangelism by ministers, individually and collectively.

RUTH ELDER AND HALDEMAN FLYING OVER ATLANTIC

London, Oct. 12.—The British air ministry informed the United Press today that from mid-Atlantic to the British Isles a southerly wind of 15 to 25 miles an hour was blowing and there were occasional rains.

An easterly wind of 10 to 15 miles an hour was blowing over England. A rather heavy fog hung over the British Isles. The weather was generally cloudy and visibility during the forenoon was bad but was expected to improve later in the day, increasing visibility from 500 yards to four miles.

Lakeland, Fla., Oct. 12—(UP)—Two wardrobe trunks filled with pretty feminine things are now in Paris awaiting the arrival of Ruth Elder.

Friends of the girl who left Roosevelt field yesterday hoping to be the first woman to fly across the Atlantic said she shipped her wardrobe to France two months ago.

Miss Elder has made her home here for two years, since her marriage to Lyle Womack.

After winning a beauty contest she became interested in flying and was tutored by George Haldeman, co-pilot of the "American Girl."

Queenstown, Ireland, Oct. 1.—(UP)—Throughout southern Ireland was pessimism today over the flight of Ruth Elder and George Haldeman from New York to Paris.

Thick fog lay off the Irish coast, having persisted for six days, and it was pointed out that at this time of year Atlantic conditions generally were bad.

MRS. F. W. GRAYSON MAY TAKE OFF TODAY

Old Orchard, Me., Oct. 12.—Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson anonunced this morning that if weather conditions were favorable she might take off in her monoplane "The Dawn" late today for Copenhagen, Denmark.

"If the weather is right and the final overhauling of our motors is completed in time, we may hop off between 5 and 6 P. M.," she said.

Locally the weather was cool and clear—ideal for the take-off, Mrs. Grayson thought.

Mechanics went to work this morning on the big yellow-winged Sikorsky amphibian, which rested on the golden sands of the crescent-shaped beach from which Old Glory hopped off on its last flight.

After being christened by Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, wife of Maine's governor, yesterday afternoon, "The Dawn" was put through two perfect test flights, in one of which it was at gross weight of 11,000 pounds. Mrs. Grayson was elated over the results of the tests.

"The plane performed beautifully," she said, "and I am more than ever confident of success."

Mrs. Brewster, on behalf of the women of Maine, pleaded with Mrs. Grayson to postpone her flight until next year, but the aviatrix refused to change her plans.

On her projected flight to Copenhagen, Mrs. Grayson will be accompanied by Wilmer Stultz, pilot, and Bruce Goldsborough, navigator and radio operator.

MICKIE SAYS:

Slave-Owning Negroes

A great many negroes owned slaves prior to the Civil war. It was quite customary for a negro man on attaining his freedom to purchase his wife, children or other relatives and in this way in effect become their absolute owner.

Worth All Sorts of Money

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

LAURA said it was the heat, when Malcolm asked her why her cheeks were so pink, meeting her in one of the impersonal little reception rooms in the Girls' club that July evening.

"You think I've been using rouge," Laura accused good-naturedly. "But I swear I haven't—don't have to. But why should you object if I did?"

Malcolm sat down rather uncomfortably on one of the cheap thinly upholstered chairs. "I have no right to object," he said. "Only I can't bear the thought of having men stare at you. You're enough to make them stare anyway. It makes me boil sometimes—to think of having you sit there in that office with every Tom, Dick and Harry coming and going. That's why it is such h— to be poor. It isn't that I want more money for itself, but I want money so that I could arrange things decently."

"What would you do if you had all sorts of money?" asked Laura. "Bet you don't know. Most people think they know—and then when they get the money they make a mess trying to spend it. You know, or think you know, when you are poor and then it comes and you don't know."

"Oh, what's the use," said Malcolm rather sulkily. "I wouldn't care if it weren't for you—I'd be content being poor—just plug away where I am till the chance came for something better. I'm no genius but I'm coming along—ten years from now I may have a good income—but loving you the way I do I can't wait ten years."

"That's not playing my game," teased Laura. "Just suppose you suddenly had all sorts of money—what would you do?"

"Funny girl," said Malcolm smiling in spite of his dejection. "Well, to start with," he said after a moment's hesitation, "I think I'd just go on exactly as if nothing had happened for five or six days—just to get my balance. Then I'd leave the office one day at about five o'clock and I'd go to the agency of some tip-top car and I'd get the best little car for two they had in the place—and I'd drive right out and over here and I'd ask you to take a drive with me—and then I'd tell you the glad tidings and I'd say: 'Laura, everything is all right. I'm worth all sorts of money. Let's get married right away,' and you'd say: 'All right, Malcolm—how about tomorrow?' Is that the way to play the game?" asked Malcolm, pleased with the ripples of laughter that his remarks had caused.

"Lovely—" said Laura, "only you forgot that you couldn't ride right out with the new car. You'd have to get a license and plates and everything."

"Don't spoil my story," objected Malcolm. "Why bother over a few facts when it's all a fairy yarn?"

It was a pleasant night and Laura suggested that they should walk the mile to the moving picture theater. "We ought to save the pennies," she said, and when Malcolm went to the window where the fifty-cent seats were sold Laura protested. "You can see just as well from the twenty-five-cent seats," she said.

It was five o'clock in the afternoon just five days later and Malcolm, seeing that all the rest of the office force had left or were about to leave for the day, drew down the top of his roll-top desk. He had known there would be nothing to keep him late and so earlier in the day he had tried to get Laura at her office. He had planned to suggest having dinner together at an inexpensive little restaurant he had heard about. They would have time for a bus ride before they had dinner. Laura always liked that. But when he telephoned to her office the young woman who answered simply had said: "Why, she's left." Yet the night before when he had seen Laura she had said nothing about leaving work early.

So as Malcolm was pulling down the top of his desk he looked up to see Laura entering the office. She asked him to go out and have a ride with her. "Great minds run in the same channel," quoth Malcolm. "I was going to suggest a bus ride myself—and dinner afterwards."

He took his hat from the clothes tree beside his desk and hurried after Laura, who seemed impatient. At the curb stood a car so new, so completely equipped and so obviously expensive that four or five young office workers were loitering beside it out of sheer admiration. A perfectly liveried young chauffeur sat at the wheel, and to Malcolm's amazement Laura opened the door of the tonneau and entered, sinking back luxuriously on the pearl-gray seat. Malcolm, dumbfounded, followed and sat beside her.

"Through the park, please," Laura murmured to the chauffeur. Then she turned to Malcolm and pressed his hand with hers.

"But, but, b—" Malcolm stammered.

"You must say, 'How about tomorrow?'" Laura told him. "You see, I knew five days ago—it was an old oil well father bought before he died. I hadn't sold it because no one would buy it—and so when you told me what you'd do I decided I'd do the same thing. Only I had to arrange for a chauffeur until we can learn to drive."

ARGUE OVER BEST WAY TO COOK EGGS

KILLING CAME AFTER DRUNKEN PARTY IN A CABIN

Duluth, Minn., Oct. 12.—(UP)—An argument over the best way to cook eggs resulted in the murder Sunday of Alex Ribic, a lumberjack, in true northwoods fashion, county authorities said late yesterday after questioning a man charged with the crime and an eye witness.

In the wilderness of St. Louis county four men all of them lumberjacks, lived in a tar-paper shack near Cusson.

Sunday liquor was produced, and before nightfall, all were drunk. Tony Hasperlin, an eye witness to the murder told police.

Pelican Jack, also known in the north country as Jack Smith said he was hungry. Ribic agreed to cook some eggs for the party. Pelican Jack wanted them fried. Ribic insisted that they be boiled.

Angered by his companion's argument, Pelican Jack, according to a statement he made to authorities, seized his double-bitted axe and swung at Ribic.

There was a moan, the lamp light went out, and Pelican Jack fled. When Hasperlin, with the aid of lighted matches saw Ribic with his head nearly severed he ran several miles to a telephone and called the sheriff. Early Monday Pelican Jack was arrested fifteen miles from the scene of the crime. Hasperlin is held as a witness.

Search for Tony Markovitch, thought to have been a second witness to the crime was halted today when both Pelican Jack and Hasperlin declared he left the shack several minutes before the argument started.

Long-Life Trees

The white oak, button-wood, white pine and hemlock are long-lived trees, says the American Tree association, and the poplars, willows, some cherries, and a few oaks are short-lived. Some of the sequoias of California exceed the 3,000-year mark, and the big cypress tree of Tule, growing in the state of Oaxaca, Mex., has been estimated from 4,500 to 5,000 years.

How Crops Are Hastened

Lettuce was ready for market in March from an outdoor garden in Sweden this year, a result of heating the soil with electricity. That the product may be matured earlier is considered a probability and further tests are planned. A main object is to obtain a ground temperature which will correspond to the comparatively high air temperature in spring says Popular Mechanics Magazine.

NO. 3092.

State of Minnesota, County of Crow Wing, in Probate Court.

The State of Minnesota to all persons interested in the determination of the descent of the real estate of said decedent: The petition of Ben N. BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

London, Oct. 12.—The British air ministry informed the United Press today that from mid-Atlantic to the British Isles a southerly wind of 15 to 25 miles an hour was blowing and there were occasional rains.

An easterly wind of 10 to 15 miles an hour was blowing over England. A rather heavy fog hung over the British Isles. The weather was generally cloudy and visibility during the forenoon was bad but was expected to improve later in the day, increasing visibility from 500 yards to four miles.

Lakeland, Fla., Oct. 12—(UP)—Two wardrobe trunks filled with pretty feminine things are now in Paris awaiting the arrival of Ruth Elder.

Friends of the girl who left Roosevelt field yesterday hoping to be the first woman to fly across the Atlantic said she shipped her wardrobe to France two months ago.

Miss Elder has made her home here for two years, since her marriage to Lyle Womack.

After winning a beauty contest she became interested in flying and was tutored by George Haldeman, co-pilot of the "American Girl."

Queenstown, Ireland, Oct. 1.—(UP)—Throughout southern Ireland was pessimism today over the flight of Ruth Elder and George Haldeman from New York to Paris.

Thick fog lay off the Irish coast, having persisted for six days, and it was pointed out that at this time of year Atlantic conditions generally were bad.

MRS. F. W. GRAYSON MAY TAKE OFF TODAY

Old Orchard, Me., Oct. 12.—Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson anonunced this morning that if weather conditions were favorable she might take off in her monoplane "The Dawn" late today for Copenhagen, Denmark.

"If the weather is right and the final overhauling of our motors is completed in time, we may hop off between 5 and 6 P. M.," she said.

Locally the weather was cool and clear—ideal for the take-off, Mrs. Grayson thought.

Mechanics went to work this morning on the big yellow-winged Sikorsky amphibian, which rested on the golden sands of the crescent-shaped beach from which Old Glory hopped off on its last flight.

After being christened by Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, wife of Maine's governor, yesterday afternoon, "The Dawn" was put through two perfect test flights, in one of which it was at gross weight of 11,000 pounds. Mrs. Grayson was elated over the results of the tests.

"The plane performed beautifully," she said, "and I am more than ever confident of success."

Mrs. Brewster, on behalf of the women of Maine, pleaded with Mrs. Grayson to postpone her flight until next year, but the aviatrix refused to change her plans.

On her projected flight to Copenhagen, Mrs. Grayson will be accompanied by Wilmer Stultz, pilot, and Bruce Goldsborough, navigator and radio operator.

MICKIE SAYS:

Slave-Owning Negroes

A great many negroes owned slaves prior to the Civil war. It was quite customary for a negro man on attaining his freedom to purchase his wife, children or other relatives and in this way in effect become their absolute owner.

Worth All Sorts of Money

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

LAURA said it was the heat, when Malcolm asked her why her cheeks were so pink, meeting her in one of the impersonal little reception rooms in the Girls' club that July evening.

"You think I've been using rouge," Laura accused good-naturedly. "But I swear I haven't—don't have to. But why should you object if I did?"

Malcolm sat down rather uncomfortably on one of the cheap thinly upholstered chairs. "I have no right to object," he said. "Only I can't bear the thought of having men stare at you. You're enough to make them stare anyway. It makes me boil sometimes—to think of having you sit there in that office with every Tom, Dick and Harry coming and going. That's why it is such h— to be poor. It isn't that I want more money for itself, but I want money so that I could arrange things decently."

"What would you do if you had all sorts of money?" asked Laura. "Bet you don't know. Most people think they know—and then when they get the money they make a mess trying to spend it. You know, or think you know, when you are poor and then it comes and you don't know."

"Oh, what's the use," said Malcolm rather sulkily. "I wouldn't care if it weren't for you—I'd be content being poor—just plug away where I am till the chance came for something better. I'm no genius but I'm coming along—ten years from now I may have a good income—but loving you the way I do I can't wait ten years."

"That's not playing my game," teased Laura. "Just suppose you suddenly had all sorts of money—what would you do?"

"Funny girl," said Malcolm smiling in spite of his dejection. "Well, to start with," he said after a moment's hesitation, "I think I'd just go on exactly as if nothing had happened for five or six days—just to get my balance. Then I'd leave the office one day at about five o'clock and I'd go to the agency of some tip-top car and I'd get the best little car for two they had in the place—and I'd drive right out and over here and I'd ask you to take a drive with me—and then I'd tell you the glad tidings and I'd say: 'Laura, everything is all right. I'm worth all sorts of money. Let's get married right away,' and you'd say: 'All right, Malcolm—how about tomorrow?' Is that the way to play the game?" asked Malcolm, pleased with the ripples of laughter that his remarks had caused.

"Lovely—" said Laura, "only you forgot that you couldn't ride right out with the new car. You'd have to get a license and plates and everything."

"Don't spoil my story," objected Malcolm. "Why bother over a few facts when it's all a fairy yarn?"

It was a pleasant night and Laura suggested that they should walk the mile to the moving picture theater. "We ought to save the pennies," she said, and when Malcolm went to the window where the fifty-cent seats were sold Laura protested. "You can see just as well from the twenty-five-cent seats," she said.

It was five o'clock in the afternoon just five days later and Malcolm, seeing that all the rest of the office force had left or were about to leave for the day, drew down the top of his roll-top desk. He had known there would be nothing to keep him late and so earlier in the day he had tried to get Laura at her office. He had planned to suggest having dinner together at an inexpensive little restaurant he had heard about. They would have time for a bus ride before they had dinner. Laura always liked that. But when he telephoned to her office the young woman who answered simply had said: "Why, she's left." Yet the night before when he had seen Laura she had said nothing about leaving work early.

So as Malcolm was pulling down the top of his desk he looked up to see Laura entering the office. She asked him to go out and have a ride with her. "Great minds run in the same channel," quoth Malcolm. "I was going to suggest a bus ride myself—and dinner afterwards."

He took his hat from the clothes tree beside his desk and hurried after Laura, who seemed impatient. At the curb stood a car so new, so completely equipped and so obviously expensive that four or five young office workers were loitering beside it out of sheer admiration. A perfectly liveried young chauffeur sat at the wheel, and to Malcolm's amazement Laura opened the door of the tonneau and entered, sinking back luxuriously on the pearl-gray seat. Malcolm, dumbfounded, followed and sat beside her.

"Through the park, please," Laura murmured to the chauffeur. Then she turned to Malcolm and pressed his hand with hers.

"But, but, b—" Malcolm stammered.

"You must say, 'How about tomorrow?'" Laura told him. "You see, I knew five days ago—it was an old oil well father bought before he died. I hadn't sold it because no one would buy it—and so when you told me what you'd do I decided I'd do the same thing. Only I had to arrange for a chauffeur until we can learn to drive."

ARGUE OVER BEST WAY TO COOK EGGS

KILLING CAME AFTER DRUNKEN PARTY IN A CABIN

Duluth, Minn., Oct. 12.—(UP)—An argument over the best way to cook eggs resulted in the murder Sunday of Alex Ribic, a lumberjack, in true northwoods fashion, county authorities said late yesterday after questioning a man charged with the crime and an eye witness.

In the wilderness of St. Louis county four men all of them lumberjacks, lived in a tar-paper shack near Cusson.

Sunday liquor was produced, and before nightfall, all were drunk. Tony Hasperlin, an eye witness to the murder told police.

Pelican Jack, also known in the north country as Jack Smith said he was hungry. Ribic agreed to cook some eggs for the party. Pelican Jack wanted them fried. Ribic insisted that they be boiled.

Angered by his companion's argument, Pelican Jack, according to a statement he made to authorities, seized his double-bitted axe and swung at Ribic.

There was a moan, the lamp light went out, and Pelican Jack fled. When Hasperlin, with the aid of lighted matches saw Ribic with his head nearly severed he ran several miles to a telephone and called the sheriff. Early Monday Pelican Jack was arrested fifteen miles from the scene of the crime. Hasperlin is held as a witness.

Search for Tony Markovitch, thought to have been a second witness to the crime was halted today when both Pelican Jack and Hasperlin declared he left the shack several minutes before the argument started.

Long-Life Trees

The white oak, button-wood, white pine and hemlock are long-lived trees, says the American Tree association, and the poplars, willows, some cherries, and a few oaks are short-lived. Some of the sequoias of California exceed the 3,000-year mark, and the big cypress tree of Tule, growing in the state of Oaxaca, Mex., has been estimated from 4,500 to 5,000 years.

How Crops Are Hastened

Lettuce was ready for market in March from an outdoor garden in Sweden this year, a result of heating the soil with electricity. That the product may be matured earlier is considered a probability and further tests are planned. A main object is to obtain a ground temperature which will correspond to the comparatively high air temperature in spring says Popular Mechanics Magazine.

NO. 3093.

State of Minnesota, County of Crow Wing, in Probate Court.

The State of Minnesota to all persons interested in the determination of the descent of the real estate of said decedent: The petition of Ben N. Anderson, having been filed in this Court, representing that said decedent died more than five years prior to the filing thereof, leaving certain real estate in said petition described, and that no will of decedent has been proved nor administration of her estate granted in this State, and praying that the descent of said real estate be determined by this Court.

Therefore, You, are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this Court, in the Court House in the City of Brainerd in the County of Crow Wing, State of Minnesota, on the 7th day of November, 1927, at ten o'clock A. M., why said petition should not be granted.

Witness the Judge of said Court, and the seal thereof, this 11th day of October, 1927.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.
